STATE WIDE FIGHT TO STOP GRIP

Allies Move to Cut Vital Railroad to Turkey

THEATRES CLOSED IN 3 PLACES

Woodward Urges Open Windows on Trains and Trolleys to Prevent Plague

An appropriation of $100,000 was made available for the suppression of Spanish influenza in Massachusetts by the Governor's Council today. This emergency fund was placed at the disposal of the State Board of Health and the Surgeon-General of the Massachusetts State Guard in fighting the widespread malady.

All theatres and moving picture houses in Revere and Chelsea were also ordered closed until further notice by local authorities and in Somerville the Board of Health issued a request for closing the places of amusement.

All theatres, churches, dance halls and places of amusement were ordered closed in Quincy and Framingham in keeping with the request of Governor McCall for all municipalities to assist in stamping out the disease. Portsmouth, N. H., did likewise.

In Boston Mayor Peters conferred with the heads of various municipal departments as to the advisability of closing all places of public gatherings, including churches and theatres.

Dr. W. C. Woodward, Boston Health Commissioner, urged upon the public the desirability of wide-open doors and windows in all public conveyances as a precaution against the spread of th malady. Dr. Woodward, while believing in the desirability of closing places where people congregate, declared that he would not order the closing of churches and places of amusement without explicit orders from the Mayor.

SITUATION IS SERIOUS.

Dr. Woodward said today, that in his opinion the situation is serious. All day he has been besieged by clergymen and theatre managers asking whether or not he intends closing the places of worship and of amusement at this time.

Dr. Woodward states that persons who might object to open cars at

ADMIRAL WOOD ILL AT HOME WITH COLD

Rear-Admiral Spencer S. Wood, commanding the First Naval District, is confined to his home, No. 107 Chestnut street, with a cold. He was unable to accompany Admiral William Benson, who left Boston today to the Portsmouth navy yard. Lieutenant William T. White, assistant commandant of the district, represented Admiral Wood on the cruise.

Two Spitters Fined in Drive to Stop Germ Spread

The first two men to be arrested and fined for spitting on the sidewalk, which was ordered to be stopped by Superintendent Crowley of the police in an attempt to check the influenza, were Otto H. Ricke, employed in Kilby street, and Antonio Dillo of Chestnut street, Chelsea. Both were fined $5.

Read These Instructions During the Epidemic

Information and helpful instructions as to influenza were issued this afternoon by the United States Public Health Service, the Massachusetts State Department of Health and the Quincy Board of Health, as follows:

1—The community should see to it that all sanitary measures are adopted to keep the milk clean and free as possible from bacteria and should have a good water supply.

2—The disease is spread by the breath and secretions of the body, especially of the nose and throat. For this reason the hands should be washed frequently and due care taken to keep others from the sick room.

3—Keep others from coughing and sneezing into your face.

4—Above all, avoid kissing.

5—When a patient has been pronounced ill with influenza, no visitor should be admitted, except one or two attendants. (This is for the good of both patients and friends.)

6—Patients to use spit cups or cloths which are to be burned after using.

7—Boil sheets, pillow cases and towels used by patients.

8—Boil dishes used by patients.

9—Keep the windows of sick room open at all times.

10—Keep flies out of sick room.

11—Call a doctor when sickness is discovered.

12—Keep patients in bed until the doctor has discharged them.

BOSTON PICKED FOR BIG U. S. SHIPMENTS

Federal Board, After Inspection Here, Gives Port Its Greatest Boom

Boston is to have 10 per cent. of all the export trade of the Atlantic seaboard from now on, following the visit here of Chairman Edward N. Hurley of the Shipping Board, Admiral Benson and other prominent Washington officials to inspect the port facilities of Boston.

This statement was made today by Mayor Peters, who is jubilant over the result of the commission's visit. It was the Mayor who urged upon Washington the availability of Boston for port activities, and made a plea to have a considerable percentage of such activities diverted here. Mayor Peters said:

"After the inspection of the port both General Goethals and D. C. Cooke of the Exports Control Committee assured me that goods manufactured for export for the United States and the allied governments east of the Hudson River will be routed through the port of Boston. This means the greatest development which the port of Boston has ever had, and is a recognition on the part of Washington of its possibilities."

ROOSEVELT TO SPEAK FOR LOAN IN PROVIDENCE

Providence, Sept. 25.—Billy Sunday is going to divide his time between "knocking the tar out of John Barleycorn" and helping in the Liberty Loan drive and has donated the tabernacle for the night of October 17, when former President Theodore Roosevelt is scheduled to assist in the drive. There will be a regular Billy Sunday Liberty Loan drive at the tabernacle the night of October 14. Sunday told the committee to post Liberty Bond signs all around the tabernacle and consider they had the right to use the structure as they choose in the interest of the drive.

FOUR NEW GRIP DEATHS REPORTED AT QUINCY

6,000 GERMANS EXPLOSION VICTIMS

Letter to Teuton Soldier Tells of Fearful Munitions Disaster at Plauen

With the British Army in France, Sept. 25.—A graphic description of the blowing up of the German powder factory at Plauen, in which more than 6,000 employes were killed, is contained in a letter found on a prisoner taken by the British.

The story was suppressed by the German government. The letter, apparently from a friend to the German soldier, follows:

"Our Sunday excursion to Plauen was a complete success. We visited the scene of the catastrophe, where three weeks ago an explosion took place in a powder factory, where 6,000 men and women were employed.

"Nearly all the workers were said to have been victims of the war, and of the total number, only twelve women are said to have escaped unhurt.

"The truth, of course one can never get at. Nevertheless, from the few survivors one can hear about the fate of their comrades. JUST IMAGINE 6,000 AND ONLY TWELVE LEFT. Is not that frightful? The scene presents a terrible spectacle. All the doors and windows were shut, as usual in factories, and only one side entrance was open. A few found their way out.

"Sixty vehicles spent the entire night hauling victims away. We visited the masses of graves at the Eastern cemetery at Plauen. Notwithstanding the sorry spectacle, our trip went off merrily. Of course, we felt sorry for the unfortunate people, but then, one cannot always be grieved. Therefore, let us look toward the sun. The living surely have their rights."

SETTLE BIG STRIKE ON BRITISH RAILWAYS

London, Sept. 25.—The railway strike which threatened to become general throughout the country has been practically settled, following a conference at Cardiff, the Exchange Telegraph reported this afternoon. The conference was held by representatives of the railway men's union. J. H. Thomas, the railway men's parliamentary representative stated that he would recommend all the strikers to return to work immediately.

BULGARS RUN 60 MILES

MELLEN'S EYE WAS BLACKED

One-Time N. H. Chief Accuses Wife of Assaults; Says He Was Provoked to Kick Her

Pittsfield, Sept. 25.—More sensational letters alleged to have been written by Mrs. Charles S. Mellen, wife of the former president of the New Haven Railroad, were read today in the hearing here, in which Mellen is suing for the right to dispose of his property without his wife's consent.

The hearing was reopened at 10 a. m. and a crowd, attracted by the sensational elements in the case, gathered to hear the testimony. Mr. Mellen has already testified that he kicked his wife through a doorway and slapped her face until her nose bled. He stated that his wife had struck him with an ash receiver, which broke his nose, and afterward threw a china egg at him.

Mrs. Mellen has started divorce proceedings, which are to be tried next month. About half of thirty love letters, alleged to have been written by Mrs. Mellen to Harry Douglas Brown, assistant manager of the Vanderbilt Hotel, New York, lent spice to the testimony. Many of the letters were signed "Kitten." This correspondence is the basis for Mellen's suit and serves, also, as the cause of an action for $100,000 brought against Mrs. Mellen by Mrs. Brown for alleged alienation.

GIVES AGE AS 67.

Mellen gave his age as sixty-seven and said he had married his second wife, the present Mrs. Mellen, twenty-five years ago, in Brooklyn. She was Katherine Livingston.

Asked as to his wife's attitude toward alcohol, Mellen intimated that she was fond of it and used it freely. "Also she smoked cigarettes."

Washington, Sept. 25—President Wilson today signed the McAdoo bond bill, under the terms of which the income on bonds of the fourth Liberty Loan which is held in amounts up to $30,000 and on bonds of the first, second and third loans when held in amounts up to $45,000 is exempt from taxation. The bill also gives the President power to regulate and control transactions in government bonds. As originally drawn, the measure would have given him power to prohibit such transactions.

BAY STATE QUOTA 323 MILLIONS

65 Per Cent. of New England's Loan Total of Half-Billion; Other N. E. Allotments

Massachusetts must raise $324,068,700 as its quota of the "Fighting Fourth" Liberty Loan. The campaign commences on Saturday. This amount is approximately 65 per cent. of New England's total quota of $500,000,000.

New England as a whole is commissioned to raise one-twelfth of the nation's total of $6,000,000,000.

Massachusetts' total is nearly double the combined quotas of all of the other New England States. The allotments are generally double those of the third loan.

The quotas of the other five States are:

Maine	$25,893,000
New Hampshire	20,372,500
Vermont	13,202,500
Rhode Island	50,000,000
Connecticut	68,862,500

Through all the district the quotas are about double what they were for the third loan. There are in the six States something like thirty or forty exceptions to this. In New Hampshire three of the typical quotas are: Berlin, $490,000; Concord, $1,766,300; Dover, $751,000; Exeter, $216,000; Franklin, $323,500; Keene, $600,000; Laconia, $340,000; Manchester, $4,665,000; Nashua, $1,167,000; Portsmouth, $818,500.

Vermont has only one place running to seven figures: Burlington, with $1,617,000, Rutland comes next with $985,000. St. Johnsbury has $582,700, Barre $400,000, White River Junction $200,400, Montpelier $621,-300 and Bellows Falls $218,000.

The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Liberty Loan committee of the Second Federal Reserve District, of which Benjamin Strong is chairman. Mr. Strong will preside.

HERTLING LIKES WILSON TERMS, IS LATEST

Certainly: Germany Agreed to Be Civilized Feb. 25; Going to Disarm Right Away!

Amsterdam, Sept. 25.—Count von Hertling, the German Chancellor, has announced his readiness to discuss peace on the fourteen principles enumerated by President Wilson, according to advices received here today.

He is said to have made known his decision in the course of his address to the Main Committee of the Reichstag yesterday. In fact, he insisted that he had evinced such an attitude as far back as February 25.

"In regard to President Wilson's fourteen points, I agreed in principle with a peace on such a basis in my speech of February 25," he is quoted as saying; "but President Wilson has not answered that speech.

Five are desirous of general disarmament and freedom of the seas.

The Foreign Secretary is ready to discuss the political situation, particularly the Austrian note."

The Chancellor announced his intention to support Prussian franchise reform on certain conditions.

"The wildest war fury is raging in the United States, and the people are intoxicated with the belief that America must bring the blessings of modern liberal culture to the enslaved peoples of the central powers," said Hertling.

"At the same time they (the American people) rejoice in the many militant ions which the construction of armaments cause to flow into the pockets of their business men.

"The situation is grave, but there is no ground for depression. Our iron will on the western front will not be broken.

"The U-boat war is slowly but surely fulfilling its task, and, above all, is menacing and restricting the sending of reinforcements from the United States."

CUBA TO SEND 20,000 MEN TO WAR FRONT

An Atlantic Port, Sept. 25.—The lone star and red, white and blue of Cuba's flag will soon fly with the colors of the allies on the western front in France, according to Jose Serrano, a merchant from Havanna, who arrived in an Atlantic port on a steamship from West Indian ports. Mr. Serrano said the first contingent of the Cuban army to go overseas will number some 18,000 men.

ITALIANS START ALBANIAN DRIVE

Paris, Sept. 25.—The Italians have started a new offensive in Albania, according to a dispatch received here from Salonica today. No details of the operation were given.

By FRANK CHARLTON,
International News Service Cable Editor

The whole Bulgarian battlefront in the Balkans is now in retreat. With the invasion of Bulgaria by allied cavalry the first definite move is made towards cutting the Orient railway, the only direct line of communication linking up Turkey with the Central empires.

The allied forces are moving upon Strumnitza, which is only ninety miles from this railroad.

The allies struck first at the centre of the Bulgarian front and it is there that the greatest progress has been made. It was estimated this afternoon unofficially that the allied advance totals well over sixty miles and the advance continues, especially in the Vardar river valley.

Following the capture of Prilep by the French the allied forces are now moving on Veles. This city, together with Ishtib are now the two main objectives of the allies.

On the western front the British have made a new gain in their flanking movement against Cambrai and St. Quentin, but progress is necessarily slow due to the tremendous obstacles which have to be overcome.

There is violent artillery duelling on the Metz front, where Americans began their offensive. The great American drive has struck fear deep into the hearts of the German soldiery. The Germans are "jumpy," which is shown by their bombardments of all the areas behind the American front.

3 YANKEE PATROLS ACTIVE.

Aside from cannonading, only patrol encounters have taken place on the American sector during the last twenty-four hours. Nothing of special importance has taken place on that part of the western battlefront held by the French.

So rapid was the advance of the British in Palestine that a pause was necessary in order to allow guns and supplies to be moved up into the new positions. British cavalry, however, is maintaining steady pressure against the Turks, and the number of Turkish prisoners is increasing constantly.

In addition to the annihilation of two Turkish armies, the balance of the Turkish forces in the Holy land have been demoralized.

Chief interest today centred on the military situation in the Balkans. The magnitude of the debacle which befell the Bulgarian army grows hourly. The whole Bulgar force has been split up by the allied advance and German reinforcements are being defeated as quickly as they are thrown into battle.

MANY BULGARIANS SURRENDER.

The morale of the Bulgarian soldiers is very low and great numbers have surrendered without attempting any defence.

The German alliance has begun to totter under the staggering blows which are being struck in the Balkans and in Turkey. It is believed that the pressure which General Pech first unleashed on the Western front and then extended to Macedonia, and Washington, Sept. 25.—David C. Poole, American Consul-General to Moscow, last reported in Helsingfors, Finland, and expected to arrive in Stockholm, Sweden, will be held in Europe it is understood here, to perform an important mission for the State Department.

ENORMOUS BOOTY CAPTURED AT PRILEP, BULGAR BASE IN SERBIA

King Ferdinand's Troops in Retreat All Along Line From Vardar to Albania.

Turkey will be continued even into the Winter.

If such is the case it would mean tremendous handicaps in the Balkans for the allies are getting farther and farther from their base of supplies at Salonica and all the necessary war materials must be carried over bad roads through the Balkan mountains.

Bulgars Extend Their Front of Retreat From Vardar River to the Struma, 30 Miles

London, Sept. 25.—The Bulgarians on the Balkan battlefront have extended their retreat from the Vardar to the Struma River, a distance of thirty miles, said a dispatch to the Evening Standard this afternoon.

The whole right wing of the Bulgarian army is in retreat. This retirement was forced by the capture of the Demirkol massif by the allies.

When the French entered Prilep they captured great stores of booty. The incoming troops were enthusiastically welcomed by the population of the city.

The Bulgars have been forced to retreat on the Babuna-Krushevo line north. (This is on the center of the front.)

On the allies' left (in Albania) the Bulgarians have been compelled to fall back. They are retreating in the Elbasan district where the roads are poor and are a hindrance to rapid movements.

"Many Russian soldiers have been liberated from Bulgarian captivity."

American Long-Range Guns Bombard Germans in Fortresses of Metz

By HENRY G. WALES,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the American Army on the Lorraine Front, Sept. 25 (11 A. M.)—Patrols were active during the night on the front opposite Metz.

A great artillery duel is in progress.

A German airplane was brought down today near Xammes by our high-angle guns, and the pilot and observer were both captured uninjured.

The guns of Fort Graf Haeseler, on the Moselle River (one of the outer defenses of Metz), kept up a harassing fire with six-inch shells against the areas in the rear of the American lines.

The long-range American guns replied, and shelled the Germans in the Gorze area.

French and Americans Repel Germans on Aisne and Vesle River Fronts

Paris, Sept. 25.—German troops attacked the French positions in the region of Moisy farm during the night, but were completely repulsed, the War Office announced today.

(Moisy farm has been the scene of terrific fighting. It lies just north of the Aisne River in the district where General Foch has been carrying out a masterly flanking movement against the Chemin des Dames.)

"There was heavy artillery firing in the sector of St. Quentin, the communique added.

"There was lively shelling also on the Vesle River front, where Americans are holding the line. A number of German raids were repelled.

The text of the communique follows:

"During the night there was artillery activity in the region of St. Quentin and between the Aisette and Aisne rivers.

"An attack by the Germans in the region of Moisy farm was completely repulsed.

"On the Vesle River front there was lively artillery firing.

"The French repelled German raids in Champagne and in Lorraine. (Americans are holding part of the Lorraine front.)

"In Lorraine the French made a successful incursion into the German lines."

British Make Big Gain Toward Cambrai and Bag 1,000 Prisoners With Guns

London, Sept. 25 (1:23 P. M.)—The British line has been advanced at Inchy (in front of Cambrai), the British War Office reported today. There was intense raiding activity throughout the night.

The Germans delivered a night attack at Sauchy-Cauchy, northwest of Cambrai, but it was repulsed.

There was hard fighting around Selency and Gricourt, where the Germans made two counter-attacks. Both were repulsed and the British made further progress in that zone.

Northwest of St. Quentin the British took 1,000 prisoners and a large number of machine guns yesterday. The text of the official report follows:

"We made further progress yesterday evening in the neighborhood of Selency and Gricourt.

"The enemy delivered two counter-attacks but was repulsed with heavy losses. One counter-attack was broken down at the point of the bayonet. Several prisoners were taken in this encounter.

"In the evening the enemy again counter-attacked at Gricourt, making a little progress. We counter-attacked and completely restored our position. Forty prisoners were taken by us in this engagement.

"Yesterday we took 1,000 prisoners and many machine guns northwest of St. Quentin.

"On Monday night we advanced our line slightly at Inchy.

"German raids were repulsed east of Demicourt and north of Lens. German raiders captured one of our posts west of Sauchy-Cauchy.

"During the night an enemy attack at Sauchy-Cauchy was repulsed.

"We carried out a successful raid at Wulverghem (Flanders front), capturing some prisoners."

Serbs Have Advanced 60 Miles and Captured 170 Guns From the Bulgars

By EARLE C. REEVES,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Sept. 25 (2 P. M.)—The Bulgarian army on the Balkan battlefront has been cut up into several groups by the overwhelming advance of the allies.

Serbian cavalry is pushing up the Vardar river to Bragalnitza to cut the main road between Gradsko and Prilib. The Serbs have now advanced sixty miles, taking 170 guns, according to information received here this afternoon. Additional prisoners are pouring in.

The main objectives of the allies are Veles and Jahlik. Three bridgehead positions have been established on the Vardar river by the Serbs, the latter being at Enlehobe.

The Gradsko-Demirkapu railway has been cut.

BRITISH BRING DOWN 13 GERMAN PLANES

Polish - American Officer Mops Up Germans

By NEWTON C. PARKE,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the American Army in France, Sept. 6 (by mail).—An American soldier of Polish descent led a detachment of Moroccans in a sharp scrap with a dozen bull-necked Prussians during the recent fighting on the Marne, and the Polish - American - Moroccan combination put the Kaiser's best down and out.

Sergeant Matez Kocak was the American. Kocak's job, as the allies were smashing on the German Marne salient one morning, was to put Boche machine gun nests out of business. He did it well.

One German stronghold was a dug-out from which a steady stream of machine gun bullets came. Kocak emerged from a thicket under the mitrailleuse fire. He dropped back, gathered up a number of Moroccans who were advancing with the Americans and charged the dugout.

No prisoners came back after that scrap.

HAIG'S TROOPS WIN DOUAI TRENCH

Kill Many Germans in Picardy Battle—British Airmen Down 20 Planes

By BERT FORD,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the British Army in France, Sept. 25 (10 a. m.).—British troops staged a successful operation during the night, capturing a Douai trench. Patrols also advanced into Selency (between Holnon and St. Quentin), wounding and killing a number of Germans and sending back several prisoners. Angered by the capture of the Alsace and Beauvraignes trenches, the enemy counter-attacked savagely during the night and for a time succeeded in advancing slightly. The British stemmed the tide of the advance and drove the enemy back promptly, taking forty prisoners.

Members of the Australian division have improved their positions in the neighborhood of "Egg Post." An unsuccessful attack was launched by the enemy in the region of Dados Lane.

German artillery is showing increased activity in the vicinity of the Hailleul and Armentieres road. The Germans launched a strong attack south of Sauchy-Cauchy, screened by a heavy trench mortar bombardment, but they were beaten badly by the British.

Despite intermittent showers British aviators have been active. Fliers attached to one army shot down twenty enemy machines yesterday. Three of the enemy planes fell in flames and six others were put out of control.

The royal air forces report eight German observation balloons were set afire.

SIMS RENEWS FIGHT FOR EMERGENCY POWER BILL

Washington, Sept. 25.—A renewed effort was made in the House today by Chairman Sims of the Interstate Commerce Committee to secure speedy passage of the emergency power bill. Sims pointed out that not only has President Wilson urged that the bill be passed with expedition, but Secretary Baker and other administration officials regard it important. He quoted Baker as stating he did not believe it was intended under the emergency bill "to construct any hydro-electric power."

No single tobacco is good enough

YOU wouldn't make a real smoke by crumpling up the finest single leaf ever grown and rolling it into a cigarette.

Why?

Because no one tobacco has everything you want in a cigarette. Straight American gives a cigarette body and "pep." Straight Turkish gives delicate fragrance and smoothness to your smoke. One without the other can't make the complete flavor men like.

To get the Mecca flavor 12 tobaccos—7 American and 5 Turkish—are used. Just mixing isn't enough. Moist heat is passed through these 12 tobaccos, for 50 hours, until they are drawn together into 1.

This is the famous Still-Blend process.

This is how they get the flavor which makes Mecca the favorite cigarette of over a million smokers.

TWO STORES

Boylston at Washington — Franklin at Washington

MRS. MELLEN'S LETTERS TO HOTEL CLERK SIGNED "FONDLY, KITTEN"

"HOW THANKFUL I AM I FELL TO REAL MAN," SHE WROTE

he declared, "and our home in Stockbridge was demoralized. Our two youngest children were peddling papers and others were hanging around the postoffice and drug store and acting in a disreputable way for children in their circumstances.

"In November, 1916, I cautioned one of our children against scattering pencil sharpenings in my library, and Mrs. Mellen said, 'Mind your own business and let the children alone.'

"I reached to put my hand on her shoulder. She had a china egg in her hand and lunged at me with it three times, striking me once. She had been drinking. I told her she should not talk that way before the children and that I would not stand for it. I brought my open hand down against her face. Her nose bled and she ruined upstairs.

ROLLED ON THE FLOOR.

"The next exhibit of physical force took place on June 9, 1917. We were sitting before the fire. Suddenly, before I knew what was up, I got a blow from her that closed and blackened my eye. She had struck me with an ash receiver and I thought my nose was broken. We rolled on the floor in the scuffle.

"Then she got up and, seeing I was not dead, rushed toward the door. I accelerated her progress through it."

"How?" asked his lawyer.

"I kicked her," was the answer. "She had been drinking," the witness added.

Eight letters from Mrs. Mellen to Brown, addressed to "Douglas Dear" and signed "Fondly, Kitten," were read at the hearing before Judge Slocum.

In one of her letters, Mrs. Mellen wrote:

"I think my head is pretty well set. It has not been turned and as it took a good many years for me to fall (and how thankful I am I fell to a real man), I don't think you need worry, dear, that Crowninshield or other grand man will ever get the best of me."

Mr. Mellen, in explaining the letters, referred to Brown as "the gladhand artist" of the Vanderbilt. Mellen smiled throughout the proceedings, except when that portion of the letters referring to his trouble on the New Haven were read. During these passages he was very grave.

In another letter Mrs. Mellen wrote:

Sometimes I walk the floor of my apartment to keep the tears back, for I am so cross at being sent up. I have always gone. I know I have to. You can see I am nothing but a child, but, dear, I am the easiest person to handle when you know how. You have had no trouble have you? Well, you never will.

I don't say there will not be tears and sometimes a downpour of a little storm, but then I know you well enough to know that I might just as well have done in the beginning, as to have made a fuss, for I knew you are firm as a rock, but I know there will be storms on my side.

Lots of love dear.

In another letter, dated Monday, Mrs. Mellen wrote:

Douglas Dear:

I shall be down on Wednesday. I should arrive at the hotel about noon. See that I am expected. Have my table for luncheon and no matter who is with me please ask me for my checks. Don't read too much after you have gone to your room, will you, dear. It tires your eyes so, and it will not pay.

Now take care of yourself and be good. I shall hope to see you on Wednesday.

UPSET OVER HAPPENINGS.

Mellen explained that "Mr. R." referred to the late "Diamond Jim" Brady. A letter written the next day reads:

Douglas Dear:

To begin with, don't be cross with me for writing you again today. I shall try my best not to have more than one letter a week after this. If I once in a while step over, please don't mind but, dear, I have no one to go to but yourself it really seems as if I had more than my share of trouble.

I am all upset over what happened on Friday and then on Sunday, dear, "M." was dreadfully blue. Not a bit cross. He never is any more. He is king and considerate, but his business worries him so.

Now this is confidential. He says he may be forced to resign. I don't think that, but you know when a man gets blue, they think everyone is against them. He says to save the road he has to step in, take his coat off and work like a man of forty. It is right, dear, but he will have to work harder for the next six months than he has ever worked before.

He is to start next week. He will be practically in Boston all the time. You know what that will mean to a man of sixty. Well, I should much rather have him work like that than have him resign and then feel that his life has been a failure.

He said on Sunday: "Kitty, if I am forced to resign, I shall consider my business career a failure."

THINKS ONLY OF TROUBLE.

Well, he is not going to resign if I can help it. When the time comes, Douglas, I shall want him to go in business. He would be much happier.

Now, dear, I think of nothing but your trouble, and it is that woman who is causing all the uproar. She is doing her best to get me out of the way. She thinks that, having Sunday will want her. Think of it dear, that is what she wants.

Oh, how she would like to get you even if it was only once. Well, she won't do it. For if she strikes for you she is hitting the wrong man. She is going to try and draw your attention on her and she thinks if she gets you a little bit interested the rest is easy.

(Signed) Fondly, KITTEN.

Another letter dated Saturday afternoon, read:

Douglas Dear:

Thank you so much for taking me to the Bella Robia room on Saturday, and showing me those wonderful tables. The room looks lovely, dear. If you could do something like that every once in a while it would be lovely. There could be no talk and yet we would be seen together.

Douglas, your talk to me on Friday was a little hard, but dear, it was what I needed, and my actions since then have been different and, dear, has worked wonders. "M." is like a new man. I really have never seen anything like it. On Friday when he came to the hotel from his office he was like a dog that had been whipped. He sank into the chair exhausted.

I went to him. I said: "You are tired. Now would it not help you a little to talk things over with me?" He looked at me. Dear. Then he began to talk. I sympathized with him, and I tried to cheer him all I could. We went to dinner. When we had finished he said: "I am so tired. Do you mind if I go to the rooms?" I said: "No, by all means go." I finished, then went to the Marshalls' table and had a cocktail with them. I then went up. We sat in the salon and talked just a little. At last he said: "I am so tired I am going to bed." He went to his room. In a few minutes I followed. The shade in the little candle by his bed was crooked. I straightened it, and for something to say, said: "This shade is on the blink." He then said: "Kitty, everything is on the blink, and I am all in." He was terribly despondent.

I went to him and took his hand. I said: "Now look here, don't lose your nerve," I said. "Buck up. You will win this fight." He said: "Kitty, I have not lost my nerve." I said: "No, and you are not going to."

We went to bed.

In the morning he came to see me. He was smiling. You would not think he was the same man. I looked at him and said: "You are feeling better today." He smiled and said: "Very much." Since then he has been like a new man.

He has talked all his matters over with me, and just before he left this afternoon to attend Mr. Morgan's funeral he came to me and said: "How would you like to hear what I have written about Mr. Morgan's death?" (You see it has to be used in the family.) He read it to me, and, Douglas, dear, he was like a different man when he went away. Then I saw him on Friday.

On Friday, dear, evidently thought, "What is the use? No one cares for me, not even my wife." That is the way he acted, dear, and when I was kind to him and showed an interest he seemed to take a new lease of life.

Now, dear, just before he left he said something about resigning and he said perhaps it would be a good time now that Morgan was gone. I don't know what to had a nerve to telephone me such a message." When you know where he was for me to go I think you will be mad. I was

"Lover's Land," Mr. Mellen explained, is a popular "spooning" place for young Stockbridge couples.

On Wednesday "Kitten" wrote:

Dearest: Oh, I had such a wonderful time on my little trip. Every minute was a pleasant one. There was absolutely nothing to mar our happiness and little Mrs. Perry is such a dear.

This is the first time we have thrown together constantly, and it is at a time like this that one can tell she is a corker.

Douglas, she is the best one I have had with me on a trip. I bar none. We like the same things. We are not easily shocked, and she, like myself, can take care of herself as far as the men are concerned.

Well, I miss you, dear. I always do. And it is such a forlorn day that I am a wee bit homesick for you. Never mind, dear, you have made my trip, oh, so much happier and I never will know about you. I know you're honest and that you don't deceive me. I can feel and I can see that you care for me, but sometimes the little yellow monster comes to the front, but then you must remember if I did not care for you he would not appear. So there you are.

You would have been cross with me if I had gone to the Plaza on Monday night for dinner, would you not, dear? Oh, they were such fun, Douglas. It was a terrible temptation, and they did want us to motor with them from Waterbury to New York. I was afraid you would be cross so I said no. Then Mr. Patten said to me, "If you will not motor to New York with us you can meet us at the Plaza and have a nice dinner." Again I said no. So I have told you all, dear.

They were nice men, Douglas, and everything they said and did was in a nice spirit, and really, dear, it was these two men who made my stay in Waterbury ideal. Yet, dear, all the time I was fooling with them I was thinking of you. I always do. You need never fear. My choice is made, but if at any time there is anything I do that you would rather I did not, just tell me.

You are good to me, dear, and you know best, but, dear, I wonder why you keep saying, "The warm weather is coming and it will be dusty here. I don't want you to come so often." That has never troubled me before. I have always come to the city, dear, during the heat as long time as when we stayed at the St. Regis, so it can't be that, and it can't be that your little people will talk about you and me, for when we stayed at the St. Regis and then at the Belmont I came just the same. You were at the Astor, so it can't be that, for I hardly knew you. I knew you, yes, but not well.

"Well, dear, whatever you want, I shall do, upstairs, downstairs, or in New York. It is for you to say, and I shall obey. Be good. With all kinds of good wishes. Fondly KITTEN

The Mrs. Perry referred to in the foregoing is Mrs. Newman K. Perry, according to Mr. Mellen.

Mellen Declares Wife Drank and Smoked Cigarettes

Asked as to his wife's attitude toward alcohol, Mellen intimated that she was fond of it and used it freely. "Also she smoked cigarettes," he declared, "and our home in Stockbridge was demoralized. Our two youngest children were peddling papers and others were hanging around the postoffice and drug stores and acting in a disreputable way for children in their circumstances."

END COMES TO ARCHBISHOP IRELAND

Noted St. Paul Prelate Had Been Ill for Several Weeks

St. Paul, Sept. 25.—Archbishop Ireland died at 2.35 a. m. today. He had been ill for several months of heart disease and stomach trouble, and for two days had been kept alive by the administration of oxygen.

John Ireland, archbishop of St. Paul, Minn., was eighty years old, having been born May 11, 1838, in Burnchurch, County Kilkenny, Ireland. His long career as an American prelate and the honors bestowed upon him called, that he was to be elevated to the cardinalate, which made him an outstanding figure.

He established a reputation for an aggressiveness and eloquence of pulpit that won him numerous friends and many enemies, for he never was accused of any lack of courage of his convictions. He was an outspoken declaring that Roosevelt was a great man as he was in his wholehearted advocacy of what appeared to him to be good.

He came to America with his parents at the age of seven, settling in Missouri. His brilliant mind was marked even in his early school days. His family moved to St. Paul, where the youth attracted the attention of Bishop Cretin. After finishing his studies in St. Paul he was sent to France for further study. Returning in 1861, he was ordained a priest.

He volunteered as a chaplain in the Civil War and served for fifteen months with the 5th Minnesota Regiment.

Father Ireland was made archbishop May 15, 1888. He won distinction by his unremitting fight to uphold the church in the Northwest and as an unflinching advocate of prohibition.

Ireland strongly championed religious freedom in America. He was democratic to a degree. Visiting royalty

CALL FOR NURSES

OWING to the seriousness of the Influenza in New England, it is of vital importance that every woman, married or single, who has had training in nursing shall report for duty at once at the office of the Bureau of Nursing, New England Division, American Red Cross, 755 Boylston St., Boston.

"It's the Bean"

I AM bought by the W. S. Quinby Company from the world's best plantations, regardless of price. I am plump and fully matured.

They bring me across the sea, clean me carefully, blend me skilfully to make the La Touraine flavor — roast me perfectly, weigh me and pack me automatically in a beautiful bag until I greet you at your grocer's.

Then what happens? You ask for me by the familiar name of La Touraine. Your grocer grinds me, or you take me home and do it yourself. And then —

You find out what fresh, fragrant, rich coffee means — what the choice coffee bean, cultivated and cared for, and carefully blended and roasted, can give you in smiles and satisfaction from La Touraine, the Perfect Coffee.

"It's the bean." You may have been buying cheaper coffee than La Touraine, but La Touraine is more economical, and the perfect beans give you perfect coffee. Always fresh, always the same. The bean comes to you with all its goodness in it. Just try La Touraine, the Perfect Coffee.

Ask to see the La Touraine Coffee you buy in the bean.

WOODWARD URGES OPEN CARS TO HALT GRIP

this time or to widely opened windows down on elevated and steam trains should now put on their Winter underclothing and go out prepared to meet Winter conditions. Fresh air and plenty of it, he says, are absolutely necessary in the battle with the disease.

Meanwhile a mobilization of 4,000 graduate and adjustment nurses is under way to cope with the situation. Miss Mary Beard, chairman of Public Health Nursing of the Council of National Defense, and a corps of associates have met and formulated plans for handling the situation. They will organize all available graduate and attendant nurses in a way that all work can be carried out under graduate supervision.

GREAT NEED OF NURSES.

Municipal authorities seeking nursing assistance are urged to communicate with Miss Bernice W. Billings, chief of the sub-division of tuberculosis of the state Department of Health. Graduate nurses anywhere in the State are urged to come direct to Boston without formality of writing. They will be reimbursed for their expense after they have reported to Miss Billings. The shortage of nurses in the city is the greatest ever known. Nowhere near enough nurses can be had to supply all the needs of the city.

12 MORE DEATHS REPORTED.

Dr. Woodward stated today that from 9 o'clock last night until eleven o'clock this morning there had been twelve deaths from influenza and four from pneumonia.

From Salem comes the announcement that there are 4,500 cases of influenza in that city. The deaths have averaged fifteen a day, over a period of several days. Red Cross officials in Salem are preparing to open the emergency hospital to handle the growing number of patients unable to secure admission to the Salem hospital.

BLAMES POOR VENTILATION.

In Framingham the Framingham and Union Hospitals are already overcrowded. As a result, the health authorities are forced to use the Symonds mansion at Saxonville for a hospital. Physicians are suffering as well, all save of those in the city being ill with the disease.

"I will not issue any direct order," said Dr. Woodward of the Boston Health Department, "which will close the theatres and churches at this time. I have not got enough evidence to show that these institutions are in any way responsible for the spread of influenza.

"The matter of closing such places will for the time being be left to the good judgment of the clergy and theatre managers. One bad situation here and one which I believe has much to do with the spread of the disease is the transportation system.

"I believe that the poorly ventilated, stuffy trains, both steam and electric and street cars are doing their share toward spreading it around. I advocate the immediate use of open cars. Further I would have wide opened windows on all trains and opened doors as well.

"People would be inconvenienced somewhat by the cold, but I consider it time to put on the heavy underwear and dress adequately so as to combat the further spread of the disease. Stringent measures are necessary and I consider proper ventilating of the vehicles in the transportation system one of the most stringent.

"People should know enough to keep out of dirty, poorly ventilated theatres at this time. Most of the theatres are properly ventilated and are meeting conditions properly. There are some, however, that are not. One wouldn't think of going into a dirty restaurant for a meal. No more should he enter a dirty theatre for pleasure."

FATHER AND SON DIE.

One of the saddest cases reported to the Salem Board of Health is that of a family named Ahearn at No. 40 Northey street. The father, Frank, aged forty, died Tuesday. He was followed early today by his son, Arthur, aged twenty, who died suddenly of pneumonia.

The wife and mother is not expected to live throughout the day, and there are several other children in the family ill with the disease.

Among the five new deaths reported in Arlington is William J. O'Boone, manager of the Harvard Photo Company.

In Concord two deaths have been reported, a boy and a girl, both twelve years old.

MORE DEATHS AT WALTHAM.

Five deaths have been reported by the Waltham Hospital in the last twenty-four hours. In the same period the Waltham Board of Health received reports of ten deaths. The names follow:

Fred J. McGowan, thirty-four years, No. 62 Fiske street, Waltham, died at the Waltham Hospital.

Mrs. Orrie J. Purdy of Cypress street, Watertown, died, leaving three children.

Garabed Megerdichian, twenty-three years, of No. 4 Melindy avenue, died at a private Watertown hospital.

Daniel Grant, No. 159 Moody street, Waltham.

Dr. Kenneth Allen, a physician of Weston, thirty-two years, died at a Newton hospital.

Antonio Gustavite, thirty-two years old, of No. 32 Middle street, Waltham, died at the Waltham Hospital.

Pasquale Cello, No. 41 Cross street, West Newton, died at a private hospital in Waltham.

Sixty New Influenza Cases Are Reported in First Naval District

Sixty new cases of grip were reported today at the First Naval District.

The Naval Training Station at Hingham reported seven new cases; Rifle Range, Wakefield, 1; Boston, Section 2, Receiving Ship 3, Little Building 19, Aviation Detachment, Cambridge, 8; Radio School 6. The total number of deaths in the district is 179. There were two deaths at the Marine Hospital, Chelsea.

Six new cases came to sick in the army, two at Westwood Infirmary, two at Newton Technical High and one at Camp Devens. Major Edward Dr. John A. Peters, deputy inspector, also

Hyde Park Doctors Urge Taking School as Hospital to Treat 2,000 Grip Cases

There are at least 2,000 cases of Spanish influenza in Hyde Park. Doctors are working in their utmost, and some cases are going without proper medical treatment.

Physicians urge that some schoolhouse or other public building be set aside as a hospital. They urge that either the city health authorities or the Public Safety Committee assume control of the situation.

"The situation is indeed critical," said Dr. David E. Hanlon of No. 1310 Hyde Park avenue today, "and one that needs prompt action. There are so many cases of influenza in the district that doctors cannot care for them all. Yesterday I refused ninety calls from outside my own practice.

"I was so exhausted at the conclusion of my day's work that I was forced to go to bed. The factories are being hard hit. I know of one in particular where 500 men are out with sickness."

Schools, Churches and All Public Gathering Places of Portsmouth Closed

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 25.—A frantic appeal for nurses was sent out today by United States health officials following an order of the Board of Health closing all schools, churches, dance halls, theatres and places of amusement, until further notice.

More than 600 cases of the epidemic were rising today and an emergency hospital was opened in the Portsmouth Contagious Hospital on St. James avenue.

The slim ranks of the Atlantic Corporation at Freeman's Point have been placed under quarantine by the naval health officials.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT MEN ARE STRICKEN

Spanish influenza has invaded Health Commissioner Woodward's office on Room 11, City Hall. Two records of the doctors of the Health Department are ill. He is Victor Safford, Boston's "epidemiologist," referred to the city to investigate and combat epidemics. It is at home with the influenza, according to Health Commissioner Woodward. Dr. John A. Peters, deputy inspector, is also ill.

12 DEATHS IN NEWTON'S ITALIAN COLONY IN 5 DAYS

In Newton for the last few days only eleven deaths have been reported to the Board of Health, but according to an undertaker, there have been twelve deaths from the malady in the Italian section alone for the last few days.

JOHN A. NELSON, LEATHER MERCHANT, DIES OF GRIP

John A. Nelson, 48, of the firm of McKinney, Nelson & Co., leather merchants of this city, is dead of influenza and pneumonia. He died early at his home, No. 70 Crescent Hill avenue, Arlington.

30,000 Grip Cases in Berlin Alone, Back in July

London, Sept. 25.—Spanish influenza is widespread throughout Germany, where, in the city of Berlin alone on July 5 there were 30,000 cases, according to information received from letters taken from German prisoners.

In one letter, written by a German woman to her son in the army, the disease is attributed to famine. She wrote:

"In the factories everyone is ill and many of the schools are shut. Spanish influenza is raging throughout the poorer population. Do you know what it really is? It is famine. In order that no one should realize that it is due to famine they call it Spanish influenza."

From Munich, there is a letter, dated July 16 which says, in speaking of so many deaths due to the disease:

"All the dead cannot longer be buried in the East Cemetery. There alone there were on Sunday twenty-five burials. What will the Winter be like? The future is very dark."

INFLUENZA CASES ON DECREASE AT AYER

Camp Devens, Ayer, Sept. 25. Lieutenant-Colonel McCornick, camp surgeon, reports that there is a marked decrease in the number of influenza cases. Additional doctors arrived here in response to requests of the military authorities to assist in checking the malady. A number of nurses also arrived. All mass gatherings in welfare huts and the Liberty Theatre have been called off on account of the danger that might ensue on the part of soldiers in contracting the disease.

KENNEBUNK VICTIMS WELL KNOWN IN BOSTON

William Stevens of the Art Department of the Boston AMERICAN received word today from Kennebunk, Me., that two relatives, Lessie Littlefield and Clarence Littlefield, twenty-five and twenty-six, respectively, died at their home in Kennebunk, Me., last night from influenza. They were the son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Littlefield and had been sick only three days. The family has several relatives in Greater Boston.

REDFIELD IS FOR QUICKER COAL RUN

Secretary of Commerce William C. Redfield, speaking today before the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, said that he had been informed by Mr. Wright of the National Railroad Administration that the talking over by the government of the Cape Cod Canal would solve the coal situation.

It is to be a solution of the coal problems of New England. In one day, according to Mr. Wright, thirty eight vessels passed through the canal and they were all carrying coal.

The secretary also stated that he had just announced to the Waterways Committee of the United States Senate that the Cape Cod Canal and the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal be dredged to a depth of 25 feet and widened to a proportionate width, and that a new sea level canal across the State of New Jersey replace the Raritan Canal of similar depth and width, which would give an inside route from the Chesapeake coal ports to the ports of Boston.

"I have the support of the Railroad Administration and practically all of the other government departments interested," said Mr. Redfield. "Only last night Secretary Daniels said to me, 'We must have these waterways.'"

George F. Webster, director of docks and ferries in Philadelphia, declared that nearly all of our troubles in New England and also the East could be obviated if the canal centring near Philadelphia had been enlarged and improved. He said the railroads had shown their inability to solve the transportation problem of the Atlantic Coast. The national welfare demands the completion of the "Atlantic Inland Waterway" in the quickest possible time. The delegates at 1.30 inspected Boston Harbor.

PUTS WAR TOLL OF WOMEN AT 500,000

Mrs. Inez Haynes Irwin Describes the Wonderful Work Done by French Women

Contrast between the typical French girl as she is pictured on war posters and as she actually is was pointed out by Mrs. Inez Haynes Irwin, whose talk for the benefit of the war fund of the Boston Equal Suffrage Association will be given at the Wilbur Theatre, Thursday. Mrs. Irwin is the wife of Will Irwin, the war correspondent, and has been on both the French and Italian fronts with her husband.

"Do you want to know what the actual picture of the real French woman of today is?" said Mrs. Irwin. "Whenever I think of them in this war I see just this picture. A big room in a munition factory with women operating strange machinery almost as far as the eye can reach. Near is a tall, robust, dark girl wrapped in a white grease-stained apron, her arms bare to the shoulders and covered with machine grease to the elbows, working like lightning.

LIFTS HEAVY WEIGHTS.

"She is lifting weights heavier than I would have thought any woman could lift. She is dirty and perspiring—as perfect a symbol of hard work as any man machinist. But her half —the glory of the French woman always—is marcelled, curled, coiled, studded with hairpins and bedaubed with brilliant sidecombs.

"I am always hoping that some French artist will see the dramatic value of these perspiring, grease-stained girls working in these munition factories, and that some time a medal with such a scene on it will be struck off."

One of the terrible results of the war, Mrs. Irwin pointed out, is the toll of women's lives.

"Five hundred thousand women in Europe have died as the direct result of this war," she said. "As war is waged today it is waged against women as well as men, and by women as well as men. This is a heart-breaking truth, but it is a truth, that so many men have been killed that the women of Europe must be not only the women of Europe for a generation or two, but they must be the men of Europe as well.

USING LIGHTER MACHINES.

"In Lyons they told us that, in ordering machinery from America, they called for smaller, lighter machines than ever before, because in the future women must work these machines. That detail, small as it is, points out the new duties which women must take upon themselves after peace is declared."

Tales of the Trenches

Lost a Leg in Battle Got a Bullet in Only Good One

With one leg wounded and the other gone as the result of being riddled with machine gun bullets, Private Bill Henion, one of the returned war heroes now under treatment at the Boston City Hospital, finds amusement in his injuries.

His favorite joke is to call others less seriously wounded than himself "cripple." He is the subject of today's installment of "Tales of the Trenches," the third in the series of true stories secured by the Boston AMERICAN from the noblest warriors who prefer to talk about anything rather than the part they took in the battles which have made history.

By KATHERINE BROOKS.

"Hey, cripple!"

The speaker let go of his crutch long enough to wave an imperious hand. The "cripple" sitting on the cot the had one little bandage on his wrist) moved along.

"Thanks, cripple," and the lardly one began the process of sitting down. A complicated process, for there were two crutches to manipulate; a "bad side" to be eased down, and a comparatively good side, with a wounded leg, doing duty for two.

For Private Henion lost one of his legs at Chateau-Thierry and got a bullet in the other. He is now at the Boston City Hospital.

"What's your first name?" I asked him.

"Willie," he answered, without flicking an eyelash.

"Ah, go on," I said—or such words to that effect as a lady may use.

"Willie," he repeated inflexibly. Then, seeing that the lady was really distressed to tag an intrepid fighter with "Willie," he added indulgently, "Well, make it Bill."

HIT BY MACHINE GUN BULLET.

"Tell how it all happened," I besought.

"Well, a machine gun bullet got me."

In Bill's opinion he had now told how it all happened. He considered that he had given a complete and graphic account of the fight. For these soldier boys are not self exploiters. They love to compare notes and spin yarns of the towns they have seen, the girls they have met, the jokes they have played; but of the fighting, not a word. You have to get it out of them with the third degree. By dint of cross questioning Bill told a little more.

"I got the bullet in my good leg first. I didn't know enough to stop, but kept on, and then that machine gun bullet got me, and I dropped. That's all."

All, except for the pain and collapse; all, except for lying untended, amid the blare of battle, until stretcher bearers would reach and take him away; all, except for the hospital doctors and nurses, the other and the knife, the long confinement; all, except for the other bullets that "got" him, four in all. Two were in the right leg, one in the left, which had to be amputated, and one in the face. But it's all over now, and I've Bill's favorite joke is calling the other fellows "cripple."

FINDS TALK AMUSING.

He went over in the Rainbow Division, Company K, 165th Regiment, and was wounded on July 28. His home is in Port Jervis, N. Y.

To hear him tell about his last fight you would think it was the most amusing thing that ever happened. Bill has large, mild blue eyes and a whimsical smile. If a visitor showed the least sympathy or sentiment, he would cut and run—crutches and all. After he was seated, he drew up his right leg and crossed it over the place where his left knee would have been but for Chateau Thierry.

"You see, I still cross my legs," he observed airily. "Can't get over the habit."

"Ladies and gentlemen," broke in a voice from the middle of the big ward, "with your kind permission, we will now render the pathetic little ballad called 'Langrees.'"

By the piano—which the kind hearted superintendent had ordered brought in for the boys when they first arrived—stood "Curly" Joe, in khaki, while another, cigar in mouth, prepared with a great deal of "concert manner" to play. There was applause. Then the accompanist began, with one finger, "The Long Trail." It soon turned into "Madelone," the popular French air which the boys picked up "over there," and prefer to the "homesick" songs which good hearted people have sent in to them. Someone has provided a graphophone and kindly folk have sent records of patriotic songs and "home songs."

WAT JAZZ STUFF.

But—"Hey! Have no some jazz stuff," is the call after a round of "Baby's Prayer at Twilight" or a patriotic ditty. "We ain't patriotic—give us Madelone."

"See, you ought to hear a bunch of Yankees singing that while they march through a French town," said Private Henion. "They can't get the words, because they're in French, but they make up words of their own, and the French people just love to hear 'em singing it. They will all come out of their homes to listen. What's the name of that town we went through," he asked, turning to a neighbor.

"Don't ask me," was the reply. "It began with U, and has three breaks in it."

"Tell about Dan Carroll getting captured," said one of the boys.

But Bill Henion felt he had talked enough. A modest soul, he hadn't been on garrulous since he enlisted. So Private Heaney told it.

Dan Carroll was captured by five Germans—it takes that number to get a Yank, and generally more. Why the Germans are so stuck at all for one American. Well, Dan was being led away when he caught sight of a fellow named Spinkel from his company, and yelled "Come and get me! I don't want to go to Berlin alone." So Spinkel got him, and between them they laid out the five Germans.

"An American soldier will fight to the death, unless he is disarmed, rather than be captured. But with the Germans it's different. A lot of them don't get better treatment after they are captured than they got before, and a lot have enlisted in our army. They were American citizens of German birth who happened to be in Germany when war broke out, and were made to fight."

A comely nurse came by at this juncture and made a sign to Bill Henion. It was his turn to have his wounds dressed. So he began the process of rising once more. When both crutches were in place and he was ready to start down the ward, he looked over his shoulder at the man who had only a little bandage on his wrist.

"Good-bye, cripple," said Bill Henion.

SUFFRAGISTS ARE CLAIMING VICTORY

Expect a Majority of One or Two Votes When Amendment Comes Up Tomorrow

By International News Service.

Washington, Sept. 25—The suffrage situation in the Senate today is generally the reverse of that existing when the Susan B. Anthony amendment last came up for action in the Senate in June.

The vote on the amendment is scheduled for tomorrow. Suffragists claim a majority of one or two votes. Then will come an anti-suffrage filibuster of half a week when, refusing a roll call, Senator Ollie James, who is still in a hospital in Baltimore, very permitted a postponement of vote. Today the anti-suffragists were in educational lines, and the one sent to the Senate is refusing a pass for Senator La Follette, a staunch fragist, who is at the bedside of his son in California.

The rule is an arrangement by which the vote of an absent Senator may cancel the vote of another absent Senator of the opposite view, or of a Senator who is present, if one who is willing to enter such an agreement may be found. There is nothing in either the House or Senate rules that recognizes the practice of pairing. It is a personal arrangement between members through which the absence of a member is not permitted to militate against any bill before the House or to assist in the passage of any bill or to against.

Both factions are taking chance in the votes of Senators Moses of New Hampshire, absent on State carnival and Martin of Kentucky but neither is expected to break with any degree of confidence.

NEW WAR COURSES AT NORTHEASTERN COLLEGE

War times demand war time measures, and Dean Hill of Northeastern College has announced a number of courses to be given at the college this year, which will be of special interest to young women who will fill the places made vacant by the men who have gone to war.

Among the courses announced are those in chemistry, which will be of great value to young women who will be employed in munitions factories, and courses in mechanical drawing, which will be of value to those who will be employed in the drafting rooms of the various factories.

Protects and Cleanses the Tender Skin

MANY toilet soaps are much too harsh for children's skins. The excess alkali removes the protective oils so that the skin chaps and chafes easily. Ordinary soaps, too, are not sufficiently cleansing to keep youthful skins healthy and wholesome.

20 MULE TEAM BO RAXO Bath and Toilet Powder

gives both protecting and real cleanliness because the Borax in BO-RAXO softens, soothes and sterilizes—and does what no soap can, cleanses the pores of all dirt and impurities.

Don't risk the use of ordinary soaps. Get a can of BO-RAXO and teach the children to use it. You, too, will find its rich, daintily perfumed lather wonderfully beneficial in toilet and bath.

LONG, GALLIVAN AND FITZGERALD WINNERS IN PRIMARY CONTESTS

Tague to Ask for Recount; Cox Defeats Ham for Second Place on G. O. P. Ticket

VOTE OF STATE

GOVERNOR (DEMOCRATIC)

Long	23,454
Gaston	20,781
Barry	14,325
Long's plurality 2,893.
LIEUT. GOV. (REPUBLICAN)
Ham	23,045
Cox	51,535
Cox's plurality 28,490.

Richard H. Long, Framingham manufacturer, friend of President Wilson, aggressive advocate of progressive legislation, was nominated as the Democratic candidate for Governor of Massachusetts at the primaries by between 2,700 and 3,200 votes.

Colonel William A. Gaston ran second, while former Lieutenant-Governor Edward P. Barry ran third.

The vote by the Democrats, with Quincy, Everett, New Bedford and eleven towns missing, but with their vote estimated on the basis of the rest of the State and of former votes in these places, was as follows:

Long, 23,450.
Gaston, 20,781.
Barry, 14,325.

Boston gave Gaston 12,111 votes, against 9,854 for Barry and 3,326 for Long.

Long's vote outside of Boston more than made up for the loss he suffered here. He carried Worcester by about 700, Lowell, 600; Lynn, 800, Holyoke 775, Springfield, 700; Fall River, 400; Marlboro, 275; Lawrence, 200; Fitchburg, 150; Chicopee, 100; Milford, 300; Natick, 200.

Long got more votes than Gaston in the precinct in Ward 14 where Gaston was born.

Charges by Frederick Mansfield did not hurt Long in Framingham, where he got 534 votes against 17 for Gaston. He beat Gaston by 7 to 1 in this part of the State.

Long won without the assistance of a machine. He told his story to the people of the State and they approved it at the polls.

Gaston's supporters are still hopeful, but it can be said beyond a reasonable doubt that he has been defeated.

Barry's vote in Boston played an important part in bringing about the defeat of Gaston.

Long's Boston vote was a personal one. He did not make any fight in this city.

GALLIVAN RENOMINATED.

Congressman Gallivan defeated ex-Mayor Curley in the Tenth district by 2,000 votes.

Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald only had a margin of eighty-three votes to his credit over Congressman Tague in the Tenth Congressional district.

The fight was even closer in the Eleventh Congressional District, where ex-State Senator Horgan won over ex-Mayor Josiah Quincy by fifteen votes.

Tague has asked for a recount, while Quincy is expected to do likewise.

Speaker Channing Cox easily defeated Guy Ham for Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor. The Boston vote, which was Cox 6,675, Ham 2,295, indicates how the ballots were cast throughout the State.

Attorney-General Henry C. Attwill was renominated over Representative Allen of Newton.

The Republican State ticket will be as follows:

Governor, Calvin Coolidge, Northampton; United States senator, John W. Weeks, Newton; lieutenant-governor, Channing H. Cox, Boston; secretary, Albert P. Langtry, Springfield; treasurer, Charles L. Burrill, Boston; auditor, Alonzo B. Cook, Boston; attorney-general, Henry C. Attwill, Lynn.

TAGUE GETS HEAVY VOTE.

The congressional fights for the Democratic nominations in the Tenth, Eleventh and Twelfth Districts attracted a tremendous amount of interest.

The big surprise occurred in the Tenth District, where ex-Mayor Fitzgerald secured only an eleven margin over Congressman Tague. The vote was: Fitzgerald, 6,032; Tague, 4,339.

Fitzgerald received a large bulk of his votes in Ward 6, where Martin Lomasney "delivered." Martin, however, was more than 600 votes short of the 2,500 he promised Fitzgerald.

Tague made a fine showing in Charlestown and East Boston. He led in both places.

GALLIVAN'S VICTORY DECISIVE.

Gallivan's victory over Curley was decisive. The totals were: Gallivan, 7,782; Curley, 5,712, giving the South Boston Congressman a plurality of 2,080 votes.

The failure of the Back Bay vote to turn out resulted in the defeat of Quincy by Horgan in the eleventh district. The totals were: Horgan, 2,969; Quincy, 2,924. Horgan's majority was only 15. There will undoubtedly be a recount.

Robert Luce of Waltham won the Republican nomination for Congress in the Thirteenth District. He received 2,432 votes. Second place went to Edwin O. Childs of Newton, who got 2,219 votes, while Nathaniel A. Francis of Brookline was third. He was given 834 votes.

This was a bitter fight. Luce's plurality of 213 was secured after a hard campaign.

In the Fourteenth Congressional District Louis F. H. Langelier of Quincy beat Leonard Williams of Dedham by 924 votes. The vote was Langelier 2,558, Williams 1,634.

John J. Kearney was nominated for the office of State Senator by the Democrats in the Fourth Suffolk District. He received 2,669 votes. There were 1,695 ballots cast for Thomas J. Giblin, while John T. Nolan got 501 votes.

Senator George E. Curran was renominated by the Democrats in the Sixth Suffolk District when he received 1,508 votes. Diamond Jim Timilty, one time leader of this district, was second with only 1,030 ballots to his credit. William H. Sullivan received 819 votes, James F. Hanley, 641, and Michael J. Horan, eighty-two.

The Democrats of the Seventh District selected Charles A. Winchester as their candidate for the State Senate. The other candidates finished as follows: Joseph McGrath, 1,338; John J. Hoar, 739, and Timothy J. Ahern, 421.

There was a light vote for the Republican candidates for the State Senate. In the Seventh District the honors went to Joseph H. Loring with 220 votes. Benjamin H. Hunt was second with 184 votes, while Fred W. Connolly was third with 175 votes.

SWIG IS NOMINATED.

Simon Swig was nominated for the Senate by the Republicans in the Eighth District. He received 1,646 votes. John Hallantyne was second with 1,562 votes, while Herman Lowenberg was third with 195 ballots to his credit.

Samuel B. Finkel, who was given 972 votes, was selected to be the Republican standard bearer in the fight for the State Senate in the Ninth District. The other candidates finished as follows: Alpheus Sanford, 830; Robert B. Martin, 227, and William E. Harvey, 92.

Lewis S. Sullivan was renominated for the Governor's Council in the Third District over Thomas H. Glynn. The vote was: Sullivan 15,107; Glynn, 4,859.

'Good Night, Curley,' Says Gallivan in Thanking Voters

Congressman Gallivan, after the primary vote was announced showing him to be the winner over former Mayor James M. Curley, said:

"My district has shown its patriotism and unswerving loyalty. President Wilson is now assured of the continuing efforts of a war-Congressman who has been firm in his support.

"The official returns have spoken so eloquently that I feel there is nothing left for me to say except, 'Thank you, Mr. Voter,' and 'Good night, Mr. Curley.'"

DRAFT EXPERT HELPS TO SOLVE ALL PROBLEMS

Do you wish accurate information regarding the draft questionnaire? If so, write to the Draft Editor of the Boston AMERICAN and he will accommodate you. He has the assistance of an expert in Uncle Sam's service, who assures every reader correct information upon which to base his answers. It makes no difference what the subject—citizenship, business, exemption, physical condition, deferred classification—ask questions about any of them and you will get the information you desire.

Questions should be brief and to the point. Write on only one side of the paper. Every letter should contain full name and address of the writer, as personal replies will be sent in some instances. Where the question is of sufficient interest they will be printed in the columns of this paper.

Some of the queries of readers and the answers follow:

Draft Editor—An forty-two years of age and registered September 12. For nearly 4 years ago I contracted a communicable disease and have suffered and still suffer a lot from it and have doctored a lot. I want to serve and am not going to claim exemption. Will I be accepted or placed in Class 1? Am unfit for service. F. J. F., Jr.

Ans.—You will probably be accepted for regular duty. It will depend on the degree of your illness. Only the physical examination can determine.

Draft Editor—I am single, quite deaf in one ear and have stricture. What kind of a show have I? I also have varicose veins. Shall I have operated? C. A. HOWARD, Boston.

Ans.—It is rather doubtful if you will be accepted for overseas duty. You will probably go into limited service and may get a chance to go to Europe.

Draft Editor—Kindly state if I am likely to be accepted for service. All my top teeth are false and I have six of my own in front—bottom. I have no double ones. Will class me I liable to be put in? JONES, Dorchester.

Ans.—Only the physical examination can determine. You will probably be put in limited service class.

Draft Editor—Is a lawyer in an essential occupation? W. A. F., Boston.

Ans.—There has been no ruling stating that lawyers are not essential.

Draft Editor—I took out first papers five years ago. My boy is over eighteen years of age, has been in this country for four years, and did not apply for citizenship. Is he an alien or declarant? H. KATZ, Chelsea.

Ans.—Your boy is an alien.

Draft Editor—I was born in Russia, January 21, 1901. When I came to the United States I was registered at school as being born May 20, 1900. What shall I do about it? L. H. S., Lawrence.

Ans.—If you have no records of your birth and cannot obtain them, the statements of your parents will be accepted.

Draft Editor—I am a Canadian with six dependents. I have not taken out first papers yet, but have lived here five years. If I am not granted deferred classification I feel duty bound to serve in the United States Army, as I will become a citizen. Now I am at a loss as to how to answer the following question: Are you willing to go back to your country and serve in that country?' I will appreciate your advice, also as answer to this question: Can I be compelled to return to Canada for army service if I am willing to serve here? L. P. BERGIN, Boston.

Ans.—If you prefer to serve in the United States Army you may do so by failure to enlist in the Canadian army on or before October 12. Answer the question that you do refuse to go back to your country to serve because you intend to become a citizen of the United States and wish to serve in the army of the United States. After October 12 you will be automatically classified by the United States draft.

Draft Editor—Kindly inform me what time the schools open for the draftees under twenty-one, and how I should apply for admission. I am a student of architectural drawing and expect my diploma very soon. What branch would you advise me to enter? How long does it take to complete a college course, and is the course laid out or are studies elective? H. E. Hamblin, N. H.

Ans.—Register at once. The schools will open about October 1. Apply in person or by letter to the college you wish to enter. If you wish to enter the Student Army Training Corps at Harvard, apply to Mr. U. S. T. C., 20 University Hall, Cambridge, Mass. Send your school diplomas with application. The course is mostly prescribed and varies according to the qualifications of the student.

Draft Editor—I had a good job with a Canadian regiment, was trained and liked to all the officers, served quite a while as servant to the colonel—one of the best. Suddenly got a cinch into my head to get away, yet never have had a mark against me in civil or military life. I got away and have regretted it a million times. Have not the courage to face my old associates, friends or the given them and my word papers for years. An English boy. Can I be taken back to Canada? I dread leaving my wife, having been married fifteen years. Am I get a deferred class? Would it be policy to join another Canadian regiment? WISHES.

Ans.—Yes, you can be taken back to Canada. Report to my good friend, George McLean, at the Parker and Canadian Recruiting Office, No. 64 Mansfield street, Boston, and he will see that you are properly cared for.

J. P. COLLINS
Boston's Piano King

IT is my piano selling policy that appeals to intelligent people—to thinking, reasoning people — to wise, economical people. People who think must know that I could not do a big piano business, year after year, if I did not have something wonderful in the way of piano selling to offer the public. I do not make pianos and I have no special make of piano to praise, push, peddle or promote—I am a free, independent operator in the piano-selling field. I secure the best makes—I buy them for spot cash when I can do so at a figure that will enable me to sell them at a big money-saving reduced price to my customers. If there is one place in Boston where the public can get the actual truth about any make pianos it is on my sacrifice selling floor. There is no room or reason for anything but the TRUTH.

GIVE RED CROSS PEACH STONE COLLECTIONS

Boys and Girls of the Boston AMERICAN peach stone drive, listen!

Do not bring peach stones into this office.

The Boston AMERICAN is not collecting peach stones; it is trying to get people to collect them for the government. Gather all the fruit pits you can, but when you have collected them, take them to the nearest branch of the American Red Cross, or to the public schools if you live in Boston, Cambridge or Somerville.

The AMERICAN now has 1,500 boys and girls who are collecting these stones. More are needed, however, and this paper will gladly furnish a service button to every boy and girl, or grown-up, who applies.

The appeal of the Gas Defence Division of the U. S. Army for fruit pits and nut shells is possibly one of the most important which has been presented since this country entered the war.

Every soldier, every nurse, every Red Cross worker, every Y. M. C. A., Salvation Army and Knights of Columbus field secretary in France must be equipped with a good gas mask before entering the field.

Help give them the best gas masks by saving up fruit pits.

WANTS DEFAMERS OF U. S. ARMY KNOCKED DOWN

Atlantic City, Sept. 23.—"Any time you hear a man declare that the American expeditionary forces are ill-ridden, knock him down," Major T. H. Thompson, U. S. A. M. C., told a thousand delegates to the war convention of the American Hospital Association.

OFFER DAILY VICTORY PRAYER IN CHICAGO PIT

Chicago, Sept. 25. — The Chicago Board of Trade, beginning today, with the ringing of a bell at noon each day, will cease all pit activities for one minute for silent prayer for an allied victory and an early termination of the war.

WAR HISTORY AT TREMONT TEMPLE

By F. J. McISAAC.

If you want to get a first hand, comprehensive view of this war from its far off beginning in 1914 down to the present time you cannot do better than visit "Crashing Through to Berlin."

I know of no history published at the present time which begins to approach this for vividness and accuracy, and it wouldn't be a bad idea for some of our budding historians to take a lesson from the anonymous individual who arranged this big work.

When I went to Tremont Temple I was expecting a sensational thriller based on the war as viewed through the lurid specialties of some lucubrant movie director; full of ridiculous fiction and downright mendacity.

What "Crashing Through to Berlin" really is, is a chronicle told in film of the happenings in this world since the Serbian fanatic murdered the Archduke of Austria.

The picture is a compilation by a genius, no less, of bits of news film, on all fronts, produced since the war began. These are fitted together with a fine sense of dramatic values, eked out here and there by a bit of studio stuff to fill gaps, and connected by a series of captions which are terse, vigorous, thrilling and accurate descriptions.

Thus you may see bits in "Crashing Through Berlin," which you saw somewhere a year or two or three ago, but you see them short of uninteresting context, and simply as flashes. That is all this picture is, flashes of history.

For the first three years of the war the films made in Germany were at the disposal of America as well as those in Allied countries. Thus the bizarre figures of our enemies, Hindenburg, the Crown Prince, the Kaiser, are available, but how the originals would scream with rage if they saw how they are used.

Such a terrible incident as the sinking of the Lusitania was of course unfilmed. To describe this artists were called in and the methods of the animated cartoons were used to picture the worst tragedy in history with fine effect.

Other producers of war pictures have felt the need of individual actors, love, passion, sorrow. The compiler of this picture was wise enough to realize that this was in the most monumental drama that ever was staged since the world began. Beside it everything personal sinks into nothingness, and presented in proper dramatic form it cannot but thrill you through and through.

PETITION U. S. TO RUN TOWN OF AYER

A petition for the Federal authorities to take over the management of the town of Ayer is being circulated among residents of Ayer. Follow in the footsteps of the town in closing its gates to the soldiers from Camp Devens.

The town is divided. In one camp are those who originally opposed having Camp Devens established near Ayer, but are now following up their opposition with action against the men of the camp. In the other camp are those who are friendly to the soldiers.

It is the latter, including many business men and prominent residents, who are asking that the town be put under military rule for the duration of the war.

"A meddling effort of a part of the town's new population," is the way a conservative resident characterized the petition.

E. M. Barry, representing the other side, said: "It is all a very unfortunate outgrowth of the sudden growth of the town. Small towns will always be small town men, and the management of this town has grown beyond them."

AYER MEN URGED TO SAVE PEACH STONES

Camp Devens, Ayer, Sept. 23.—Activation of fruit stone and nut of the cantonment has been directed to the necessity of saving peach stones, prune pits, cherry pits, apricot pits, plum pits, olive pits and date seeds for shipment to the Gas Defense Division, Chemical Warfare Service, Long Island, New York, to be used in connection with the manufacture of carbon for gas masks.

Army Orders to Be Transmitted by Pigeongrams

Pigeongrams are the new method of communicating with Camp Devens, Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., and other posts from the Department of the Northeast. They will be in good working order, as soon as the pigeon loft is completed, on the roof of the Headquarters of the Northeast, No. 99 Chauncy street.

Major Foster Veitenheimer, Signal Corps officer of the department, is going to show by means of the pigeongrams that important messages can be sent quicker by this method.

DIVINITY HALL TAKEN OVER BY RADIO SCHOOL

U. S. Naval Radio School, Cambridge, Sept. 23.—Radio School authorities to enlarge its buildings at Harvard. Divinity Hall, long prominent on Harvard grounds, has been taken over by naval authorities for use by the radio students. While no definite plan has been laid down, it is not unlikely that more dormitory buildings will be taken over in the near future.

Now that the Radio School is in normal operation again, the officials in charge, in collaboration with the Y. M. C. A. have set about to entertain the radio students. An instructive moving picture, "Fit to Fight," has been shown at Instruction Hall, and it is planned to present several other war films from time to time.

Spanish influenza is laughed at by Radio attaches. No fear is entertained that the malady will again present itself, although there has been, and will be, no relaxation in precautionary measures taken by the medical authorities.

Every Woman Needs IRON at Times

If women would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak, rundown, tired-out or nervous, they would not suffer so many headaches, backaches and laggard days; they would not grow old so early in life, they would build up their red corpuscles, become rosy cheeked, bright and beautiful, and be much more attractive in every way. When iron is lacking in the blood of women, the healthy glow of youth fades away, and then the charm and vivacity departs. A tonic is needed. Nuxated Iron works wonders in many cases, or money refunded. At all good druggists.

Origin of the "Marseillaise"

THE "Marseillaise" was originally entitled the "Song of the Army of the Rhine" when it was written by Claude Joseph Rouget de l'Isle, at Strassburg, in 1792. Alsace was then in France, and the Army of the Rhine was a French army.

This Day in History

THIS is the anniversaray of the discovery of the Pacific Ocean in 1513 by Vasco de Nunez Balboa. The Spanish explorer, inspired by many rumors, set out in quest of it. He obtained his first view from a mountain in the Isthmus of Panama.

The Burden of Proof

Unusual War Time Picture Drama Featuring Talented Marion Davies and Staged by Julius Steger

(Novelized from the motion picture "The Burden of Proof," based on a drama by Victorien Sardou and produced by the Marion Davies Film Corporation. Scenario by F. M. Weller. Screen version copyrighted.)

By Jane McLean

THE girl arose and went over to him. "My dear Bob, what's the matter?"

"I'M the matter," he answered. "Of all the blithering idiots!"

Mr. Blair flushed. "Well, I wouldn't put it that way, Bob." He turned to Elaine. "My dear, when men are in love they do strange things, and Bob is in love. I can prove it to you by his sins of omission. He omitted to tell you that gentlemen going abroad through submarine zones on government business do not take their wives with them."

Elaine Understands

Elaine took Bob's hand. "My dear boy—it's my fault. I suggested it—but I see how foolish the idea is—but we'll be married just the same and when the war is over we can make the trip and perhaps it will be all the more interesting."

"You certainly are a brick," cried the young man, crushing her into a bear-like embrace, oblivious of the presence of the dignified Mr. Blair.

"A sentiment I concur in," said the witness of this evidence of womanly patriotism.

Several people known to the Brooks family did not enter into the wedding spirit with the same feelings that animated Mr. and Elaine and their numerous friends.

One of them was Mrs. Durant, and another was Dr. Kemp. The widow was waiting for a chance to do Ames any malicious harm she could compass without detection, and Dr. Kemp was anxious to know the nature of the business which the young man was going abroad.

He sent for Mrs. Durant and welcomed her with his usual suavity.

"I see you did not relish the item about the departure of Mr. Mills," she remarked casually.

"Ah, my dear lady, quite true—I did not print it for patriotic reasons."

"And yet I have to thank you for the money," continued Mrs. Durant.

"You don't have to," answered Kemp, still politely.

A Bland Rejoinder

"I do, nevertheless."

"I appreciate your feeling," said Dr. Kemp, "many persons are not so generous."

"I have taken pains to inquire," he went on, "and the general impression is that Mills is on a hunting trip."

"Not at all unlikely," said Mrs. Durant drily, "most diplomats do go on hunting trips."

"I sent for you," said the editor, lighting a cigarette, "to ask if you had heard anything about the Ames wedding—of interest to us."

Dr. Kemp took a contemplative puff or two and waited.

"Nothing of interest that I know," said Mrs. Durant, "surely Mrs. Brooks has kept you informed."

"A very valuable contributor, thanks to you," said Dr. Kemp smoothly, "but of course her fault lies in lack of newspaper training—you appreciate that—an inability to grasp the fine points."

Mrs. Durant said nothing.

"That young man appears to be quite a person, doesn't he? "I heard a report—but gossip is rather undignified between us two."

"If the report concerns me," said Mrs. Durant, "I should say we were simply talking shop."

"Ah, we hear so many things," said Kemp, "that we can't believe, and this one"—he shrugged his shoulders.

"Oh, it is about me, then," said Mrs. Durant, with the air of a Cardinal Richelieu surprising a Mary di Medici.

"Yes—how you corner one." Dr. Kemp leaned forward—"It is about you, but too ridiculous to repeat."

"Probably that will attach to its value," remarked Mrs. Durant.

"As between friends." Dr. Kemp made a deprecating gesture, "they —the great indefinite they—say that young whipper-snapper, Ames, threw you over."

"I wasn't aware I'd made any loan year proposals to him," answered Mrs. Durant.

"Of course not—I know, you know, we know—I'm telling you what they say."

The widow's face crimsoned. "Very enjoyable, but I must say I was expecting something more—manly-style."

Dr. Kemp was outwardly imperturbable—inwardly he noted with satisfaction that Mrs. Durant would be henceforth an implacable enemy of Ames. The wily editor had touched the widow with the most deadly foil he could have invented, and she was now—even if she did not know it herself—willing to do anything he suggested to satisfy the revenge she felt she must have.

For some time the editor rambled on about inconsequential social items, and when he brought forward the subject nearest his heart it was in a n offhand manner calculated to minimize its importance.

USED RESINOL FOR BAD SKIN TROUBLE

Considers Recovery Remarkable

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 14.—"For almost six years I suffered from a severe case of skin trouble which began with swelling and intense pain in my knee. Then my leg became inflamed and sores broke out, which itched and burned terribly day and night. I tried many remedies, but gained no relief. Every spell lasted six months in the hospital, and the doctors wanted to amputate my leg. At last I tried Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap and obtained relief from the first application. My knee is now well, and I consider the cure remarkable, as my trouble was very serious." (Signed) Mrs. Henri Mauer, 416 Hooper Street.

Lady With the Complexion

By Beatrice Fairfax.

THE lady with the matchless complexion at the Atlantic City Hotel crowded the world war off the map as a topic of conversation.

The men would be comfortably seated on the plazza, their chairs tilted at just the proper angle to discuss long-distance strategy in winning the war, some one would be holding forth on barrage—when "The Lady With the Complexion" would come along, and the war as an issue would fade away in a mist-tered chorus of, "Never saw anything like it in my life!" "It's too good to be true!" "Looks like one of the figures in a hairdresser's window."

The "Lady with the Complexion" bowed to every one, but never smiled at any one. Never became impatient when the waiter let twenty minutes elapse between serving soup and fish. Did not look distressed when the sailing party was four hours late and every one supposed they had been drowned. In short, she never permitted herself the luxury of looking human under any circumstances.

And so it went all day long. Then one day a genially battered looking woman, presumably in the late forties, turned up at the hotel. In repose her face was a network of lines, but when she laughed or was interested she looked like a girl.

This woman was all sparkle—enthusiasm and, somehow or other, when the "Lady With the Complexion" was in sight, motionless as a bit of bric-a-brac, every one unconsciously looked at that wrinkled little woman, who was as effervescent as a bottle of champagne. And someone said she made such an agreeable antidote, after looking at the canned beauty.

The mystery grew, the tension got on the nerves of the knitting cabinet and the long-distance strategy board—it was the speaking one's vacation at a thrilling movie with the denouement never in sight.

Then one Saturday the husband and sixteen-year-old daughter of the Wrinkled Lady came to the hotel, and beheld the cat was out of the bag before the mystery was eaten the first pound of chocolates offered by the knitting cabinet.

The embalmed looking lady and the wrinkled one had been schoolmates, and the latter was four years the junior of the other, who "will never see fifty again," said the enfant terrible, biting into two chocolates at once.

"But what's the matter with old perfect—what given her the wax flower look?" the man over draft age inquired.

"Oh, that's a long story," sweet sixteen began. "Once on a time she used to look like every one else—then she went in for face culture."

"Don't tell me that's her!" asked a knitter purling with care.

"I'm-umph! She had her wrinkles all filled up with paraffin and where her double chin was loose she had a little piece taken out."

"You don't say so—well, wasn't she the tricky little German," mused the man above draft age, while the knitting cabinet relaxed. At last they were in possession of the mystery, the mystery that had seemed to threaten their constitutional rights to health, wealth and the pursuit of happiness. For they all knew that the lady with the wax plexion was years older than they were. Something there was about that petrified beauty that made her seem older than "She," and yet they couldn't just put a finger on it and disclaim it for the horrible, unnatural thing it was.

"Mary," said the man above draft age to his wife, "come out on the Boardwalk and I'll buy you something. Your honest wrinkles look good to me."

Fills Stomach With New Energy

Weak, Worn Out, Gassy, Sour Stomach Revived and Made to Enjoy Food With Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Most of us eat three times a day and often forget that each meal should be disposed of in the stomach to make room for the next. The failure of the stomach to do this is called indigestion or dyspepsia, with its sour risings, gas-rumblings, pain, depression and the feeling of stuffiness when breathing is difficult.

The most effective remedy and the most reliable and harmless is known to it at any drug store in the United States or Canada, is Stuarts Dyspepsia Tablets, at 50 cents a box. Instead of depriving yourself of food or going on a starvation diet simply keep on as you have and let these tablets digest it, put your stomach, digest the food and keep you in the fight.—Advertisement.

NEW SOCIAL LECTURE LEAGUE

"It reads like a Story Book," is the way one of America's most happily married society leaders opened the subject of her remarks on Hair Culture, at the first organized lecture of her newly inaugurated Course on Timely Topics at her home on the Hudson just outside of New York City.

"I have been a great outdoor enthusiast all my life and I make it a rule to do without my hat whenever possible, both in the daytime as well as evening. Jack, my husband, some years ago remarked that I would have to probably give up my running about bareheaded now that I was getting a bit gray. But I am not to be outdone simply by a few or many gray hairs. I went right to the most reliable authority I could get on the subject. The result was I avoided putting a lot of harmful dyes on my hair and I began using a hair Color Restorer called Q-Ban and in no time Jack had to confess he didn't understand how my hair got so beautiful. Was I dressing it different, or what?

"You may rest assured I haven't told him anything about it, although he very often remarks my hair certainly does look fine. Q-Ban is our little secret."—Advertisement.

"WELL," hesitatingly, "I have had no time to think about it. I do not know, Bob," with a bright smile, "of one thing I am certain. I would rather have it owned by some one who was a friend of yours—and, therefore, a gentleman—than to have it bought by some one whom I dislike and distrust as I do Amos Chapin. It would hurt less to know it was the property of your friend than a man like him," with a gesture toward the door through which Amos had recently passed. "But, you see, no time is to be lost. For unless Douglas gets a better offer he will probably close with this one. To be frank, he feels it is his duty to do so."

Conversation was checked by the ringing of the supper bell. As its clanging ceased Mrs. Chapin called from the hall: "Lizzie, where are you, dearie?"

"I am here," the girl answered, starting towards the door. Her companion detained her long enough to make a suggestion.

"Suppose you do not tell the Chapins that I know who you are until we have had a chance for a long talk."

She nodded her assent.

"When will that be?" he asked. "What about a walk over to the woods tomorrow afternoon?"

"Very well," she agreed. "I will go with you tomorrow afternoon."

CHAPTER XLIV.

MRS. CHAPIN was moving nervously about the dining room when Butler and Elizabeth entered.

"I declare," she complained, "it's too bad the way Pa gets upset about things! I heard him just now out by the woodshed giving that Polo a great talking to. I don't know what the matter was, but Talak does seem to cross him dreadfully."

"Your husband is going to discharge him soon, I think," Butler remarked.

"Well, I hope he is!" Mrs. Chapin said. "I never did like that poor crazy thing, anyway—although I must say I'm kinder sorry for him. He's not responsible."

Elizabeth spoke soothingly. "Well, never mind, dear Mrs. Chapin! Come and sit down at the table and begin your supper."

"Yes," the matron agreed, "there's no use waiting for Pa. He'll come when he's ready, and not till then. Oh," with a start, as the trio took their seats, "I get sort of tired of this kind of life. There's work and fuss all Summer, and then quiet and nothing to see all Winter."

"You would like the city better?" Elizabeth questioned.

Mrs. Chapin glanced at the door to be sure her husband was not within earshot.

"I wouldn't want Pa to hear me say it, dearie, but I really would like to live in the city, near Clifford. I miss him more and more all the time."

"Of course you do," Elizabeth sympathized. "Well, perhaps some time you will go out to Chicago to keep house for him."

The mother shook her head. "No, Pa won't hear of it. I didn't used to mind so much, when Pa was younger and liked to go about more. But he's changed very much lately, and I'm afraid to leave him. He's not responsible."

A Stirring Serial of East and West

In the last year—this Summer in particular, I'm sure he's not well, for he never used to be so testy as he is now."

A step on the porch silenced her. A moment later Amos entered. His face wore an annoyed look and he spoke fretfully.

"So you have commenced without me, have you? It's just as well, for I was kept late, having another set-to with Talak. There was no need of everybody getting a cold supper on that account."

"I hope your supper's not cold, Pa," his wife ventured conciliatingly.

The farmer made an effort to speak more pleasantly, glancing at Elizabeth as if to learn what her mood was.

"That's all right, Martha. I guess the supper's good enough, anyway. I suppose, Lizzie, you'll be glad to know that I've given Talak notice that he can go when his month's up."

The girl replied indifferently. "It doesn't affect me one way or the other—except that he has frightened me when he was drunk. But I am on my guard now, and I do not walk on the roads about here alone."

A Thrilling Story of an American Girl and German Intrigue in This Country

"SENT that a little dangerous?" he observed. "The police mean having him."

"You're dead right," the Irishman replied. "They've got to have him, and he knows it. They'd keep their hands off any one in these parts if they could, but this bloke's different. He done it too thick, and he's got the public squealing. Now if we could get him out for long enough, he's the man for your job. Come right along, boss."

He rose heavily to his feet, crossed the room, and threw open the door of what was little more than a cupboard at the farther end. The place was in darkness, but a human form sprang suddenly upright. His white face and glaring eyes were the only visible objects in a shroud of darkness.

"That's all right, kid," the Irishman said soothingly. "No cops yet. This is a gentleman on business. Wait till I fix a light."

He stepped back, and brought a candle from the table at which he had been seated. Fischer helped him light it, and by degrees the interior of the little apartment was illuminated, its contents were almost negligible—there was simply a foul piece of rug in the corner, and a broken chair. With his back to the wall crouched a slim, apparently young man, with a perfectly bloodless face and black eyes under which were blue lines. His clothes were torn and covered with dust, as though he had dragged himself about the floor, and one of his hands was bleeding.

"The gentleman's on business, Jake," his host repeated.

"Give me some whiskey," the young man mumbled. The Irishman shaded his eyes.

"Holy Moses! why, you've finished that bottle!" he exclaimed.

"It's like water," the fugitive replied in a hot whisper. "I drink and I feel nothing; I taste nothing—I forget nothing! Give me something stronger."

He tossed off without hesitation the tumbler half full of whisky which his guardian fetched him. Then he came out.

"I'm sick of this," he declared. "I'll sit at your table. It's no use talking to me of Joba," he went on, "I couldn't get out of here; I made for the docks, but they headed me off. They know where I am. They'll have me sooner or later."

"Yes, they'll have you right enough," the Irishman assented; "but there was any chance to the world, this gent could give it to you. He's got a job he wants done up amongst the swells in Fifth avenue, and there's money enough in it to buy Anna herself, if you want her. Anna's our real toff down here," he explained, turning to Fischer, "and all the boys are crazy about her."

Jake shook his head, unimpressed. Fischer fixed his eyes upon Fischer, moistened his lips a little, and spoke in a sort of croaky whisper.

"Money's no use to me," he said, "nor women either—I'm through with them. You know what I done? I killed my girl. That's what I'm going to the chair for. But if I could get out of this, I'd do your job. I'm kind of hating people. I can't get my girl's face out of my mind. Perhaps if I did your job I'd have another one to think about."

"Pleasant company, ain't he?" the Irishman grunted. "He's the real goods."

Fischer stared at the young man as though fascinated. He seemed beyond and outside human comprehension. Their host was sitting with his hands in his pockets and his feet on another chair. The braces hung from his shoulders upon the floor, his collarless shirt had fallen a little open. His face, with its little tuft of red side whiskers and unshaven chin, was reminiscent of the forests.

"If you want this job fixed, Mr. Stranger," he said, "I don't know as Jake here couldn't take it on. It'd have to be done like this. Jake's a real tonev chauffeur—drive anything. If you had your automobile at a spot I could tell you of one evening, just at dusk, I might get him that far, in a set of chauffeur's clothes. Once on the box of your auto, he'd be out of this and could give 'em the slip for a bit. It's the only way I can think of, to get him near the game."

"The arrangement would suit me," Fischer admitted.

Jake suddenly showed a gleaming set of unexpectedly white teeth. His eyes stared more than ever.

"I'm game! I'm on to this," he cried fiercely. "You can have all there is coming to me, Sullivan, if I get nabbed, but I'm going to take my risk. I hate this hole! It's a rat's den."

"Then get you back to your cupboard, Jake," the Irishman enjoined. "I've got to talk business to the gent."

How to Determine Your Liability for Service

This is the sixteenth article by the Boston AMERICAN concerning the questionnaire and the draft. This article tells you how to determine your liability for service and where to find your serial or red ink number.

If you have filled out your questionnaire and made an exemption claim or not, you have by this time a natural curiosity to know how you are classified and where you stand in the draft.

Your standing in the draft depends upon two things: Your classification by your local or district board, based upon your exemption claim, and the order in which the serial number given you by your local board is drawn in the draft lottery in Washington. That drawing is to take place not later than Saturday dispatches to this newspaper advise.

To know what your serial number is consult the lists posted at the headquarters of your local board. If not already posted they will be by next Saturday, or the day of the drawing. Such draft boards as are not now ready are heading every effort to have lists completed in time for the drawing.

WATCH FOR DRAWING.

To know what your order number is, watch the result of the drawing at Washington as it appears in the newspapers. Suppose your serial number is 256. If 256 is the first number drawn at Washington, then you are the first man in your district liable to the draft and will be the first to be summoned for physical examination. This holds good unless you are placed in any one of the deferred classes, which are Classes 2, 3, 4 and 5.

If your serial number is No. 2 and is the 110th number drawn, then 115 men are before you in your district for liability for service, excepting such of those men as are in deferred classes by reason of being exempted. If only a few of those ahead of you are in Class 1, then you are so much nearer the top of the list.

Your serial number is your red ink number. It is your key number. Find out what it is and look for it when the figures are published in the order of their drawing at Washington. Count all the numbers that are before it, beginning at the top of the list, and this will give you your order number.

NO SYSTEM FOLLOWED.

Most of the districts average 2,000 registrants, and numbers above that to such cases will be ignored. If your district has 2,000 or 3,000 registrants their numbers above, they are skipped by your local board and are not counted in.

No system is followed by the local boards in picking serial numbers. A pile of registration cards are heaped upon a table and members of the board pick from them at random and number the cards in numerical order from one up to the highest number of registrants.

Your classification notice will be mailed to you by your local board. If you have changed your address from the one you gave on registering, make haste to notify your board of the fact.

The notice of classification is soon followed by a notice to appear for physical examination, if you are in Class 1. If the notice of classification fails to reach you because of the wrong address, the notice to appear for examination will also miscarry for the very same reason.

APPEALS TO LOCAL BOARD.

If you do not wish to take examination at the proper time you are classed as a delinquent and receive the notice and the onus attaching to that class.

The burden of learning what your classification is in the draft and of the date to appear for examination, if in Class 1, rests upon you.

If you find after claiming exemption for dependency that the Local Board has not recognized your claim, you can take an appeal to the District Board if you wish to. Notify your Local Board of your intention to do so and the case will be submitted to the higher authority.

If your claim has been one for exemption on grounds of industrial or agricultural occupation, your local Board has nothing to do with that. It is determined by the District Board. If that board decides you have no grounds for exemption you have no further redress.

There is an exception, however, that it is well to keep in mind. If in deciding that you have no industrial or agricultural grounds for your exemption, one member of the district board votes in your favor, then you can make an appeal to the President of the United States.

MAY ASK NEW AFFIDAVITS.

In any appeal to the district board no man is legally entitled to present further evidence concerning his claim that the board is bound to consider. He may tender additional evidence by affidavit if he wishes to do so, but the board is not obliged to consider it.

The district board may ask for additional evidence, or it may summon witnesses to ask for additional information.

If granted exemption on grounds of dependent wife and the wife dies or separates from him so that he is no longer her main support, the status of the registrant is changed and he must notify his local board within five days or suffer the penalty for his failure. The same holds good in the case of the death or removal from dependency of any relative, or anyone, to support whom the registrant has received exemption.

If exemption is granted because of industrial or agricultural occupation, and the man changes his position, he must notify his local board within five days or suffer the consequences. Neither are the consequences to be regarded lightly.

Men given deferred classification who go on strike become amenable to the same regulations within twenty days. Men who are voluntarily out of work for twenty days automatically change their status and should notify their local board. This does not apply to men who are out of work because of illness.

Remember, a mistake in the spelling of your name given you no cause to offer that as an excuse for not receiving any notice which your local board sends you. It is up to you, not to your board.

If for any reason you change your address, be sure to notify your local board of your new address at once.

If you are going to be away from home for a short time, have someone at home notify you of any notice sent you by your local board.

If you are going to be so far away from home that you cannot respond to the demands of your local board within the time set, have your wife or some relative, or some friend whom you have named in your registration card, ask your local board for an extension of time.

Local boards are willing to grant reasonable extensions of time when circumstances make it necessary, but they are hard on draft delinquents. Don't get in that class.

DUNDEE AT HIS BEST AND WINS

New York Lightweight Outsteps Young Britt in Rapid Twelve-Rounder at Arena

By RINGSIDE.

Johnny Dundee, New York lightweight, may be going back, but he showed few traces of it in his fight with Frankie (Young) Britt at the Arena.

Johnny won Referee Larry Conley's decision, but he has to step his fastest every foot of the way. By using the "stiff" that made him famous, his jumping left leads to the face, getting away without return, Dundee piled up his lead. Frankie being right there with him at infighting.

Only once did Conley have to separate the two whirlwinds, who stood head to head and hauled rights and lefts to body and head. And there wasn't much to choose between them.

They lost no time at the first bell in mixing matters. Britt tried to get to Dundee's damaged left eye, but was unable to reopen the old wound.

The bout bristled with action throughout, with Britt shining in spots, especially the early periods. But Dundee "leveled," won the sixth round a mile and had enough on Britt at the final bell to be fully entitled to Conley's award.

Billy Carney of New Bedford whipped Sailor Porter in the eight-round semi-final. Pooler was badly outclassed all the way.

Kid Lee and Johnny Gray, the Chelsea rivals, are still tied in their league. They went six even rounds.

Burt Jones and a man, not a boy, announced at Battling Butler of Arlington, started a six-round bout. There were plenty of knockdowns by both in the third round. Butler, who looked a good bit past his registration age, resigning at this point.

McCORMICK WINNER OVER MILLER IN NAVY BOUT

At the weekly naval bouts held in the mess hall of the Hingham Naval Training Station, Daniel McCormick defeated James Miller of Cambridge. Joe Gans of Roxbury and Daniel Manley of Cambridge drew. Joseph Prescott of Lowell beat George Hayes of Dorchester. John Kelley of Roxbury beat Joseph Crossman of Minnesota in three rounds. Eddie Shevlin was referee.

The cup final was won by George Burgess of Dorchester.

For next Tuesday night's bill efforts are being made to match Miller with Daniel Manley of Cambridge. These two have met twice before, both bouts ending in a draw, and if they are matched again it will be to a finish.

LAHN AND CURRIE TOP BILL AT COMMERCIAL A. C.

Battling Lahn of New York and Joe Currie of New Haven, Ct., two speedy steppers in the lightweight division, hook up in the main bout on Friday night's boxing card at the Commercial A. C. They are carded to negotiate the twelve-round route.

Mike Paulson, youthful St. Paul battler, and Young Gallo, Boston pocket, R. I., clash in the semi-final, at ten rounds. Young Chaney of Hamilton and Harry Gilbert of the North End, collide at eight rounds, and Frankie Madden of East Boston and Mike Travers of New Haven, Ct., furnish the six-round curtain-raiser.

WAR CLOUD BREEZES IN HANDICAP AT AQUEDUCT

New York, Sept. 25.—War Cloud showed himself a real race horse at Aqueduct. In a field of four in the Roslyn Handicap he breezed the mile and a sixteenth and finished four lengths in the lead without having been asked to show how fast he could run.

The highweight handicap went to Hollister, which moved to the front at the eighth pole and finished with plenty of reserve. Wise Man squeezed through on the rail in the last sixteenth and got the place money in the last few strides.

Whist II., in the steeplechase, and Torchbearer, in the hurdle, were shut out being pressed. Sketchy, favorite in the last race, was knocked out of contention right after the start.

Tremblay and Romaine are welterweights and as both are fast and rugged milliers the bout promises to be a thrilling prelude to the main event.

Pershing as Medicine Man

The Sort of Treatment That Revived Lloyd George Stimulates All the Allied World

Copyright, 1918, Star Company.

Success is the greatest of all curative medicines. General Pershing seems to aspire somewhat to the position in the civilized world that the medicine man held among the tribes of our aboriginal Indians.

The other day Lloyd George, rising from a sick bed, said that the news of the American success at the St. Mihiel salient was better than any of the other medicines he had taken. General Pershing now responds with this assurance:

"IT SHALL BE THE ENDEAVOR OF THE AMERICAN ARMY TO SUPPLY YOU WITH OCCASIONAL DOSES OF THE SAME SORT OF MEDICINE, AS NEEDED, FROM NOW UNTIL THE FINAL VICTORY HAS BEEN ATTAINED."

The world will feel no apprehension lest General Pershing should be unable to administer his prescriptions as promised. Just at present Foch, Haig and Pershing form the greatest trio of medicos to prescribe for the ills of democracy and humanity known to man.

In the pleasantry exchanged between the English statesman and the American soldier there is more than a mere jest. The victories that have been won almost without interruption by the allied armies in the last two months have revived and stimulated the world, outside of the Teutonic nations, in a manner approaching the marvelous.

Beyond doubt, at the moment of the sudden change of fortune heralded by the victory of our Marines at Chateau Thierry and in the Belleau Wood, the world of the allies was gloomy. The Germans had made their tremendously successful drive, beginning March 21, and there was no confidence among us that the check at the Marne was more than a temporary one.

Our own students of military strategy were seriously debating whether the next prize of war for the triumphant enemy would be Paris or the Channel ports. The question of the day was whether the connecting link between the British and French armies could be pierced and each in turn rolled up and overwhelmed by the triumphant Teutonic host. The allied nations were hardly discussing the question as to whether the Germans would win a victory; they were rather considering how great that victory might be.

In a few hours this was changed. Relief ousted grave apprehension, and in time came certainty of victory. It must ever be a source of great pride to the people of the United States that their troops were a part of the very first stroke by which the tables were turned. And to that national pride will be added further congratulations that, when it seemed for a moment as if the stiffening of German resistance in the west had ended Foch's progress, the sudden blow delivered by General Pershing's forces against the famous salient and the outposts of Metz stimulated allied enthusiasm once more to the highest point.

It is perhaps General Foch to whom, as the chief in command and the supreme strategist of the allied armies, credit for dispensing this reviving medicine should be given. And it is evident that he intends to keep up this course of treatment.

Under the existing organization of the allied armies, Marshal Foch is in command of all, from the North Sea even to the Black Sea, for the British troops at Baku are technically under his command—though it is doubtful if he exercises that authority.

But it is evident that the vigorous advance by the French and Serbians in Macedonia was ordered by the Generalissimo. The Bulgarian line in that section had been largely stripped of their German officers and of German commands. This fact was recognizable to Foch by the appearance of these troops on his front, and he at once ordered the successful movement of the allies in the southeast. The Bulgarians are no force to be left to themselves without the guiding hand of Germany's military efficiency and genius. Far away from Metz as the scene of this conflict may be, it may still have a conceivable effect on General Pershing's campaign against that German stronghold.

This unity of action could never have been effected without the creation of one supreme commander of all the armies.

A Tribute to Our Colored Soldier

The AMERICAN has received the following letter on an interesting and important subject:

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

I am reliably informed that two million colored Americans have registered for service in our army and that nearly 300,000 are already in active duty. In view of the splendid heroism which some of them have displayed on the battlefields of France, it seems opportune to call attention to the following remarkable tribute paid to colored soldiers by the late General B. F. Butler, who recruited and commanded thousands of them during the Civil War.

This address was issued at the time he retired from the command of the Department of Virginia and North Carolina:

Headquarters Department Virginia and North Carolina, Army of the James:

January 8, 1865.

To the Colored Troops of the Army of the James—

In this army you have been treated not as laborers, but as soldiers. You have shown yourselves worthy of the uniform you wear. Your bravery has won the admiration even of those who would be your masters.

Your patriotism, fidelity and courage have illustrated the best qualities of manhood. With the bayonet you have unlocked the iron-barred gates of prejudice, opening new fields of freedom, liberty and equality of right to yourself and your race forever.

Comrades of the Army of the James, I bid you farewell! Farewell!!

BENJAMIN F. BUTLER,
Major-General Commanding.

AN AMERICAN.

What General Butler said more than half a century ago is true in our present struggle. Our colored fellow-citizens are sustaining America's honor no less loyally and efficiently than their white comrades. This is the unanimous opinion of our officers at the front.

America Speaks

I AM the refuge of all the oppressed,
I am the boast of the free,
I am the harbor where ships may rest
Safely 'twixt sea and sea.
I hold up a torch to a darkened world,
I lighten the path with its ray,
Let my hand keep steady
And let me be ready
For whatever comes my way let me be ready.

Of better than fortresses, better than guns,
Better than lance or spear
Are the loyal hearts of my daughters and sons,
Faithful and without fear.
But my daughters and sons must understand
That Attila did not die,
And they must be ready,
Their hands must be steady,
If the hosts of Hell come high they must be ready.

If Jesus were back in the earth with men
He would not preach today
Until He had made him a scourge, and again
He would drive the defilers away.
He would throw down the tables of lust and greed
And scatter the changers' gold.
He would be ready, His hand would be steady
As it was in that temple of old, He would be ready.

I am the cradle of God's new world;
From me shall the new race rise,
And my glorious banner must float unfurled,
Unsullied against the skies.
My sons and daughters must be my strength,
With courage to do and to dare,
With hearts that are ready, with hands that are steady,
And their slogan must be prepare.
They must be ready.

With a prayer on the lip they must shoulder arms.
For after all has been said
We must muster guns if we muster Huns,
And Attila is not dead.
We must be ready.

INKLINGS AND THINKLINGS

The taking of the fords on the Jordan has deprived the Turks of even one more river to cross.

Bulgarians say it is time to listen to "reason." In the meantime the Serbians are saying something to them.

Gasless Sundays have led many persons to make the astonishing discovery that they have legs.

IT WAS on a street car in New York.
AND THERE was a woman conductor,
AND WHEN I was getting on.
SHE HOLLERED at me.
THAT I'D have to hurry.
AND I did.
AND DROPPED my nickel
INTO THE little box.
AND WAS standing there.
ON THE back platform.
AND SHE ordered me in.
AND I went.
AND IN a little while.
I CAME back again.
ONTO THE platform.
AND ASKED her kindly.
WOULD SHE let me off
AT THE next crossing.
AND SHE rang the bell.
AND THE car didn't stop.
AND I said to her.
"WHAT'S THE matter up front?"
AND SHE answered me.
"HOW DO I know?
YOU HEARD the bell!"
AND I could see.
THAT SHE was cross with me.
AND I just waited.
AND WHEN the car stopped.
I ESCAPED.
AND WENT back a block.
AND ENTERED a building.
AND THE elevator man.
WAS A blond woman.
AND I told her my floor.
AND SHE let me off.
WITH THE admonition.
TO "STEP lively, please."
AND I stepped lively.
AND WENT to the office.
WHERE MY friend is.
AND THE office boy.
WHO USED to be there.
AT THE little gate.
HAD GONE away.
AND THERE was a girl.
READING A book.
AND THE old office boy.
HAD BEEN instructed.
TO LET me in.
WHENEVER I called.
BUT THE new girl.
SHE JUST stood up.
AGAINST THE little gate.
AND ASKED me my name.
AND WHAT I wanted.
AND SAID her boss was busy.
AND WHEN he was through.
SHE'D GO in and tell him.
AND WENT back to her book.
AND I sat out there.
FOR HALF an hour.
AND THEN left.
AND WALKED home.
AND WHEN I got there.
MY WIFE sent me out.
TO GET her some yarn.
FOR SOME army socks.
AND I'VE made up my mind.
THAT IF they'll take me.
I'M GOING to war.
INSTEAD OF staying home.
AND BEING badgered around.
BY A lot of women.

I THANK you.

WRESTLING WITH LIFE PROBLEM A TASK

By Winifred Black

THE stress of the times falls upon young and old alike.

The children just trying to get through high school have a problem of their own. No matter what efforts are made, many parents have, reluctantly, been obliged to take their girls and boys out of school and set them to work.

Catherine has been three years in the high school and feels it a heavy cross that she has to give up now and spend her days in work instead of in study.

It has been an uphill struggle, her school life. She has endured all sorts of privations to keep on her course, and now she is almost tragic over losing her last year.

I am sorry for Catherine and the thousands of girls and boys who, like her, have had to give up school—but, after all, the case is not desperate.

There are night schools, and there are libraries, and there are school books that can be studied at home.

Many of the most useful and some of the most cultivated men and women have been without any systematic schooling. Of course, I do not mean to quote such great men as Lincoln, who had no schooling whatever, and many other great men and women who have been self-educated.

Studying at Home

But girls and boys of ordinary ability can educate themselves ready for the world's work if they choose to give their energy and their spare time to study.

You will miss the stimulus of teachers and classes, Catherine, but even then you'll find something in getting acquainted with your own mind.

You'll never be lonely after your day's work if you have laid out in your room a course of study which you regularly follow. If you look around you you will find someone to advise you—perhaps a former teacher, who understands what you need.

After all, one's education is never finished. You have much to learn now, and if you had completed your high school course you would still have a world of knowledge before you to master. You are learning, or should learn, much every day in your work.

I am sorry for every boy and girl who loses the best training the schools can give, and yet I know many men and women who are fine in every respect who left school at an early age. They are all naturally intelligent, and those who have really educated themselves had in childhood a taste for reading.

The wisdom of the world is stored in books. Not stupid, dry books, but books which have the very life fluid in them. To cultivate a taste for the best books is the first great step to education.

The schools fail often to give a taste for reading, and so the graduate steps out into life not prepared for the larger education. Even the universities send out many crude men and women whose ideas have scarcely been modified by years of schooling.

Winning Life's Best

And then Catherine has another grievance. She has a craving for piano lessons, and has to choose between them and a night school.

She has never had any lessons on the piano, but now she is balancing and wondering which is best for her, a night school, where she can continue her high school course or piano lessons.

It is easy to make up some one else's mind, isn't it? And hard to see clearly into another mind?

Why, as for me, not for one moment would I think, were I in Catherine's place, of taking piano lessons. Why, spend precious time drumming on piano keys? Music is a taskmistress too severe for any but those who have a special talent for it. And as for piano playing, I think it has been very much overdone. I would urge Catherine to drop all thoughts of the piano and buckle down to study.

Work hard, study hard, get some amusement and good cheer out of life as you go along.

The time will soon be here—maybe it is here now—when every useful thing any one can do, and do well, will be in demand and held in high regard.

And, remember, with patience any task can be mastered.

So, boys and girls who have to leave study and go to work, it may be only for a time. Somehow, somes way, you can make the best of yourselves, school or no school.

TODAY

A Long Road's End.
Power Will Not Listen.
The Hungry Do Not Rebel.
Late Bulgarian Repentance.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

The end of a very long road comes tomorrow, when the Senate will vote on the Constitutional amendment to give women the ballot.

For long years courageous, devoted women, defying ridicule, have worked to obtain political freedom for their sex and have died—mocked and disappointed.

But that which is right prevails.

And tomorrow one-half the population of the United States will submit to the Senate of the United States its right to political freedom. It cannot be believed that the right will be questioned or refused. The world's new democracy is not to be "democracy for men only."

* * *

Never in the history of righteous war has there been so long an uninterrupted stretch of good war news. Hard to realize that there was a recent time when the Prussians were advancing proudly, and again making their boast about taking Paris.

Now it is one wide retreat. The principal murderers, Germany and Austria, are discouraged, Austria begging for peace and Germany backing the request.

* * *

Bulgaria, nation of brigands for sale to the highest bidder and sold to Prussia, wants peace on any terms.

She is probably sorry that she sold out to Prussia. The Havas News Agency reports that 566 Bulgarians were recently executed at one time by order of Prussia for deserting.

* * *

We shall learn many things from the Russian revolution—so-called.

We have learned already that it is unwise for the great to ignore the little too persistently.

A reader sends in a quotation from the "Life of Tolstoy."

The great Russian was pleading with the Czar, Alexander III., for the lives of condemned political Russians. He wrote: "I am an insignificant, unrecognized, weak and worthless man to advise the Russian Emperor how to act in the most complex and difficult circumstance that has ever occurred."

* * *

They let Tolstoy talk, but ignored him.

And now the last ruling Romanoff is dead, murdered, and the great country that would not listen to Tolstoy obeys the murderous orders of Trotzky and Lenine, who, in turn, obey the orders of Prussia.

The powerful would save themselves and the world trouble if they could listen in time and avoid later obeying orders of the brutal and ignorant.

* * *

Another interesting dispatch of the Havas Agency, quoting a neutral diplomat, declares that food in Berlin is so scarce that diplomats from neutral countries live on what is sent to them from home.

Food in Berlin will be more plentiful soon, for Liberty motors will take it there, to supply American soldiers now on their way to the Prussian city.

The diplomat describes the Prussians as huddling in crowds, asking each other what is going to happen, waiting for a calamity.

They are crushed, spiritless, hungry and discouraged.

* * *

There may not be left in them the energy to rebel and hang their Kaiser, and they may wait, like sheep, for the shearers to come marching in from the west.

The hungry, discouraged and downhearted never rebel. The revolution came in France when the country was prosperous and the balance of trade in favor of the French. There was no revolution in France when the people were so poor, miserable and starving that a law was passed forbidding the living to eat the bodies of those that had died of the plague.

It takes courage to rebel. Apparently the Prussians will not bolt all and will wait patiently for the Allies to come in and hang the Kaiser for them.

* * *

"Clean things up in a hurry" seems to be the motto of the United States now in all directions.

The war has been swift since the Americans arrived and since Foch, the Frenchman, took charge of everything.

In a few days the United States is going to borrow from its citizens six billions more and it is announced that the money, equal to six times the total debt of this nation before the war began, will be paid off in fifteen or twenty years.

"Clean the docks, settle the war, wipe out the debt and start again in a better world with autocracy well buried," seems to be the American plan.

It will mean big taxes for years. The country can afford them. It will mean also debts paid, this generation paying for the wars of this generation, instead of handing on a debt to the future.
